Foreword

S the Graduating Class of one of the leading Schools of Nursing in the world, we have had more opportunities than many who have preceded us, and upon us must depend in a large measure whether or not our science is to advance still farther. The successful progress of nursing must depend on the standards of our profession as a whole. The problems which will confront us in the future concern nations—and we can only master them by coöperation. Perhaps this book may help to make each of us realize that she is not merely a student of nursing, but one of many students of nursing.

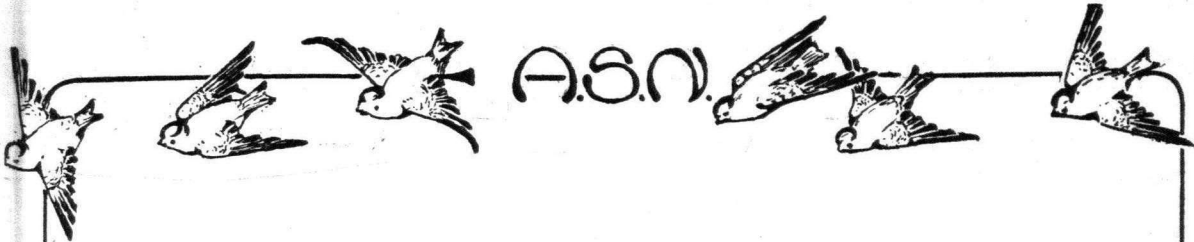

In our life, while training, many things have occurred which in the future it may be pleasant to remember. These pages will recall such happenings, when our brain cells have mislaid them in years to come.

To our classmates we have little to say—we wish to thank you for rendering this volume possible and for having found time in your busy careers to contribute to its pages.

The Editors wish to thank their associates who have been the authors of this book, and the Art Staff who have created it aesthetically. The Business Managers have been untiring in their labors, and we cannot say too much in their behalf. Potential editors are as plentiful as blades of grass, but good business managers are few and far between.

Let us conclude by saying good-bye. To you, who have been our classmates and shall ever be our friends—to our Faculty, who have given us our knowledge of nursing and have shown us our duties and responsibilities—to the Army School of Nursing of whom we may not speak, for she is too dear to our hearts. As her daughters, there is nothing which we cannot face and conquer. Let us say then that the purpose of this volume is to establish our class as an entity.

History of the Army School of Nursing

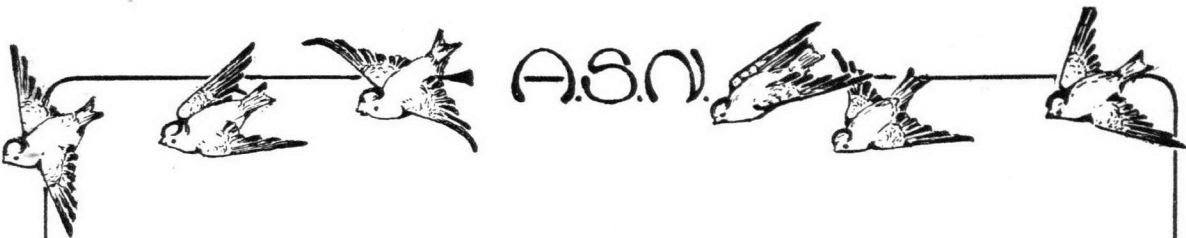

URING the first year of the war the need for army nurses in America became more and more acute. In 1918 it reached a crisis. The Army Nurse Corps had 235 Regular Army Nurses and 165 Reserves as its pre-war strength, but one nurse was needed for every hundred men; that is, for every ten or more men who would require hospital care after the big drives began, and more nurses were in urgent demand. In the emergency the country turned to precedent. What had England done? In August, 1914, she had had only 350 nurses in her army and navy together, and all the available graduate nurses could not fill the sudden demand. Yet she had cared for nearly half a million wounded during the first year of the war. How had she solved the problem? Her solution had been the Aid. In all the army hospitals the untrained women, from the Duchess to the seamstress, were serving under the trained Sisters, doing the work and proud of doing it well. America said, "Let us have Aids!"

Yet already there were those in England who were dissatisfied with the system there. It was essentially on an emergency basis. It held nothing for the future, either for the Aid herself or for the reconstruction work when peace should come. The Aid was always an Aid; and, though she won the title of Red Cross Nurse after a certain term of service, her training was never equivalent to a course in an established school of nursing. It was putting the best of the country into the ranks, with no opportunity for advancement. If America accepted the English scheme, she accepted one already recognized to be short-sighted.

All this question arose early in 1918. In February the employment of Aids had been decided on. On February 18th Miss Goodrich entered on her duties as Chief Inspecting Nurse in the office of the Surgeon-General.

The idea of an Army School was not a wholly new one. Someone must have thought of it in mid-Victorian days, for Florence Nightingale referred to it then as infeasible. In 1917 it had been suggested that the American Army might take half-trained students from civilian hospitals and give them a year of experience in military nursing. The plan, however, had been abandoned. When Miss Goodrich took her oath of office the scheme for procuring Aids was so well under way that one would have thought nothing could postpone it. Yet postponed it was. In the following months there were many who coöperated with Miss Goodrich in framing the Army School; she foresaw, to quote her words, that the nursing profession would be called on "to contribute in fullest measure to the restoration of this crippled and scarred humanity." "This," she said, "is our sacred legacy of labor from the young fathers of the country, that their supreme sacrifice may bear fruit through a fair and unblemished manhood of tomorrow." Looking toward that tomorrow, and the days of reconstruction, she saw the possibilities of an Army School. She begged Col. Smith for time to collect data and present the plan in proper form. Col. Smith gave her the time she asked.

Miss Goodrich at once set out, in company with Miss Burgess, on a tour of inspection. They looked into the possibilities of a number of military hospitals. These inspections led them to believe that "it would not only be possible to place regular student nurses in this field, but that schools, if properly conducted, would greatly help the work of the Medical Department."

In so short a history there is no space to tell of the conferences and committee meetings necessary for maturing the scheme of an Army School. There are names, however, which we should know and remember with gratitude: Col. Noble, Col. Moncrief, Col. Ashburn, Lt. Col. Smith, Maj. Longcope, Maj. Charles Mayo, Miss Delano, Miss Thompson and Miss Burgess, who met Miss Goodrich in the first conference. Gratitude we owe to those members of the Nursing Committee of National Defense, Miss Nutting, Mrs. Higbee and Miss Clayton, who gave their advice and help. The names, however, which will always mean most to us are the names of the three who drew up the plan, and who signed it and pinned their faith to it, Miss Thompson, Miss Delano and Miss Goodrich.

The plan, briefly summarized, was as follows: There was to be a central organization in the office of the Surgeon-General, with a Dean and other officials. In each of the camp hospitals where the plan was to be tried there was to be a Director and a staff of lecturers, instructors and supervisors, under the Director, a group of students, ranging from 30 to 80 in number. These were to be high school graduates or the equivalent, and credit was to be given to those with college education or training in technical schools. The course of study was to be that specified according to the standard curriculum issued by the National League of Nursing Education, and affiliations with civil hospitals were to give the experience in the nursing of women and children and in doing district work which the military hospitals could not supply. Graduates of the Army School would be eligible for state registration and membership in nursing organizations. An Advisory Board was to direct the general policy of the School; this board was to include not only the Dean of the School and officials in the Army and Navy Medical Departments, but also the Presidents of the three great nursing organizations and the Director of the Department of Nursing in the American Red Cross. Thus it was intended from the very beginning that the nursing profession, as well as the War Department, should stand back of the Army School.

It was after the Surgeon-General had approved of the scheme, and while the question was still being considered by the War College, that Miss Goodrich brought her plans before the 24th Annual Convention of the National League of Nursing Education, meeting at Cleveland, Ohio, May, 1918, to secure the coöperation required. The other two national nursing organizations, the American Nurses' Association and the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, were also represented. Would they support the Army School, or would they not? On their answer depended the response to the call that would be issued for directors and instructors; on it depended the affiliations that would be open to the future Army Student. The sentiment so common was expressed by one of the members, "I do not like the idea of taking the young, unsophisticated, romantic girl straight from her home and putting her into the environment of a camp of 50,000 men." Miss Goodrich reminded them that not so very long ago people had entertained as strong a prejudice against putting girls into Bellevue. Miss Delano said, "I have realized that there were dangers connected with it, dangers perhaps to the applicants, dangers perhaps all along the line. But is there any way of carrying on a great war without danger? I think not. We must accept the dangers."

Miss Powell had already moved that the "Army School of Nursing, as planned by Miss Goodrich, be endorsed by the three organizations." After the discussion the motion was seconded and carried by vote. The Army School had taken another step toward existence.

On May 25, 1918, the School was definitely sanctioned by the government. As soon as the plan was accepted, quick action was taken. The Women's Committee of the Council of National Defence, the Red Cross and the Nursing Committee of the General Medical Board of the Council plunged into a recruiting campaign. The office of the Surgeon-General secured statistics of high schools and colleges, and figured what the results would be. Miss Goodrich believed that by October 1st they could supply the Army with 1,000 students; by January 1st with 5,000, and by July 1st with 15,000. The campaign was soon in full swing; talks in colleges, appeals from the pulpit, lectures in every sort of public places. The office of the Surgeon-General waited for results. They came!

In five months little less than 11,000 applications were filed. The office force and the Bureau of Credentials worked day, night and Sunday. The response to the call cheered them in the midst of their fatigue. Between July 24th and the February of the following year the School was started in 31 base hospitals, and the machinery put in motion; the history of the School as a student body had begun. The story of the separate groups must be told elsewhere.

In September the influenza epidemic came. The camp hospitals were suddenly filled with sick and dying men, and an emergency more pressing than that caused by the war was upon us. Calls were sent out to scores of us who were still awaiting orders, telling us to report for immediate duty. There was a response of 100 per cent. We can be proud of that.

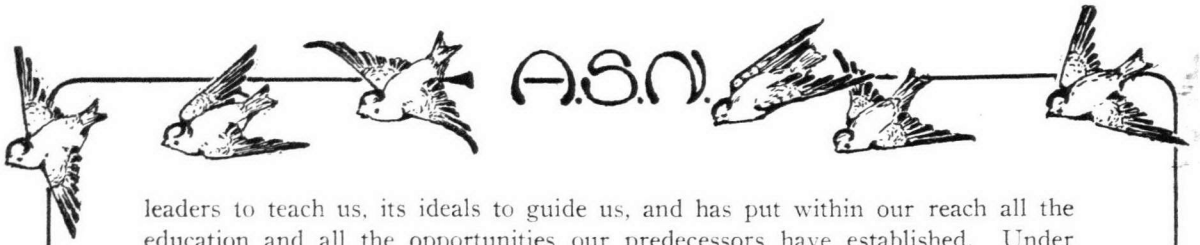

Following this terrible epidemic came news of the Armistice. The end of the war emergency might be seen, and the students in the Army School were told that, if any wanted to leave, they were under no obligation to remain. No one could promise us that there would be such a thing as the Army School in a year's time. All plans were uncertain, all people dissatisfied. Girls left the School by twos and threes, feeling they were no longer needed. We waited, and at last, March, 1919, we received the first hint of the permanence of the School. We were then asked either to declare our intention of completing the whole course or of leaving, and we said, "That means we can graduate from the Army School." Five hundred and forty-eight of us declared our intention of staying.

The school now entered on a strange and kaleidoscopic period. We were shuffled about like pieces in a Chinese puzzle. We were sent from base hospital to affiliation, and back to the Army again, or shifted from one camp to another, never with the least idea of where we were to go next. All the small base hospitals gave up their students; only four posts, Fox Hills, Sheridan, Letterman and Walter Reed, retained the training school. At last it was only Letterman and Walter Reed. We were parted from the places where we had done our first work; we were parted from the Directors to whom we had given our first loyalty; we were even parted from our friends, sent as we often were on different affiliations. It was hard, but we learned a lesson from it. In the civilian hospital among strangers we all clung together, and walking the streets of Philadelphia, Chicago, New York or San Francisco, we hailed any girl in our uniform like a sister, even if we had never seen her before. We had learned to look on the entire Army School as our Alma Mater, and not the particular camp from which we came.

The more this spirit grew and the more we became conscious of our own entity, the more we regretted that we might be the last and only class in the Army School. Should no one sit in our class room or give hot packs to Mary Chase when we were gone? Then, in the spring of 1920, it was rumored that a new class was coming in. The rumor grew to a certainty, and in the autumn they came. School activities were organized, nothing to do with the new class, perhaps, but going hand in hand with the feeling of permanence they gave us. We formed a basket-ball team and a class organization, with an athletic manager and a president. There were lively class meetings at Walter Reed and Letterman, and affiliated groups joined by post in the elections. Traditions were worth starting since there would be those to follow after.

Now we are near the end of our training, and the chapter of our undergraduate life will soon be closed. All through our three years our two sponsors, the Army and the Nursing Profession, have stood by us. The Army has given us our class rooms, our text-books and our lecturers, our recreation and our pay, and has dealt with us liberally. The Nursing Profession has given its leaders to teach us, its ideals to guide us, and has put within our reach all the education and all the opportunities our predecessors have established. Under the leadership of Major Stimson a new class will be given the chances we have enjoyed. The promises that were made us have been kept, and more than kept, and we turn to thank our sponsors. For over two years we have worn our pin—the caduceus of the Army with the lamp of Florence Nightingale. After we graduate we shall wear the emblem still. We have tried to keep faith as faith has been kept with us, and when we leave we shall do our uttermost that the vision of the Army School of Nursing may come true.

DOROTHEA M. HUGHES, A. S. N.

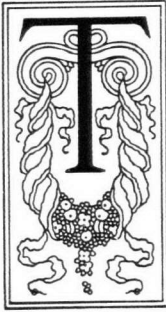

Reflections

Do you ever stop to ponder
What these years have meant to you?
Just to dream and sometimes wonder
If the future's unknown view
Can hold the fascination
Of these years we've just been thru?
We've seen life in its truest,
In its bleakest, bravest hue;
We've been with souls departing
And we've helped bring in the new—
It's living every hour
The long day thru
That makes us stop to ponder
What the future holds in view.
Will we ever be so weary,
Yet so deeply happy, too,
In the days that stretch before us
As these years we've just been thru?

ELEANOR LOWELL, A. S. N.

Our Debt to the Army School of Nursing

HIS year marks the graduation of the pioneer class of the Army School of Nursing. We, as the members of the class, shoulder the responsibility of laying the cornerstone for the reputation of the school.

Unconsciously people give precedent to those who have been trained in Universities and Colleges, whose qualities have been established by a long line of efficient men and women trained within their walls. These people have by degrees made a deep impression of the merits of their schools on the minds of the people, and thus it is that the succeeding classes go away bearing the invisible stamp of quality which they are in honor bound to uphold and retain.

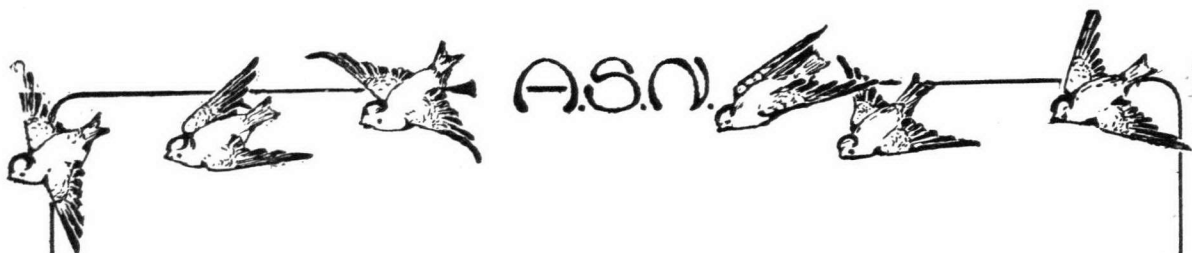

Now that our student days are numbered and the class is about ready to scatter and take up work under different circumstances, we begin to wonder what kind of a label our school will give to us to identify and recommend us to the world at large. It is more than we can hope for that this stamp has already been made and that the mere act of receiving a diploma will put its mark on our ability.

It is our task, and that of the classes which follow us, to slowly put the letters in their places, but it is ours alone to choose and place the first ones. We have received a thorough and complete training, relieved from monotony by change of scene and methods. We have had affiliation in the best hospitals and, incidental to this, we have had travel to broaden our viewpoint. All this is our material for the making of the seal which shall stamp the ideals of our training school. If the initial letters are correct, the succeeding classes can add the rest easily, but if they are not the ones which spell the standards of our school they must be erased and replaced with some effort by those who follow.

When we leave it should be with the resolution to put this school upon such a basis that the A. S. N. will mean to our profession what West Point does to the military world. No other class will have the same unique privilege that we have as pioneers of breaking the way for an excellent record in the lifetime of this institution.

It is for us to begin the building of a reputation and prestige for the Army School of Nursing, a reputation which will hold succeeding classes to standards on a par with those of Florence Nightingale, whose emblem we wear and whose teachings we aspire to follow.

Ici, je reste dans mon lit
Tous les jours et tous les nuits,
Rien de faire, rien de voir,

Ah, petit "Oiseau Bleu,"
Tu m' apportes de vie un peu!

Praise to the Army School

Let your praise ring loud and clear
To the Army School,
In her daughters' hearts most dear
May she ever rule.
Source of light! Lamp so bright,
Guard her holy flame,
Which has led us through the fight,
Sing praises in her name.

For strength to see and do the right,
We thank our nurse's training,
Though dull routine might dim our sight,
Thy light was ever flaming.
Army school! Army school!
Loyal, true, and strong,
Lead our class to noble deeds,
To fight and conquer wrong.

TO MY CADUCEUS!

Because of you I bear aloft the standard
Of high resolve—ideals pure and true;
And to ignoble thoughts I have not pondered
Because of you.

The Beauregard Unit

An aviator, flying over the great pine forest across the Red River from Alexandria, La., noted Camp Stafford, an old Confederate camp, and chose the site as the location of Camp Beauregard. Back in the antebellum days that section of Louisiana meant little to the fifty of us when living at our homes in the Middle West and South. Yet since our arrival there in October we have fondly claimed that place as the one where we gathered our first impressions of camp and hospital life. It was here that we, tired from our new work among those suffering with influenza, found our army cot in the tents on Bluebird Alley a welcome; and even though the mosquito netting over our cot at night made captive the buzzing, biting mosquito, which army regulation meant to keep out, we slept soundly in the ozone atmosphere.

In spite of the fact that our sojourn at Camp Beauregard extended over a period of a little more than two months, our ward duty, our class work with recitations in the little school house, our chaperoned walks and weekly trips to Hotel Bently for civilian eats are subjects for lengthy chats. During December the training school at this post was discontinued, forty-five of us made a journey along the Red River and the Mississippi to New Orleans, and then to Camp Wadsworth, S. C., entering as the fourth class there and designated as the Beauregard Unit.

Our Days at Colonia

Oct. 15. Well, we're all here. There are thirty-six of us, all talking at once. "Oh, do you come from Vermont? I come from Park Place myself." "Yes, I got just a dozen and a half collars and cuffs, and two pairs of shoes. Just what the circular said."

"Isn't she stunning? And she shakes hands with everyone!" It has been a long and weary day, so I guess we'll sleep well in our new beds.

Oct. 16. Pep all gone. Why do they insist on sticking needles into us?

Oct. 17. They have the strangest signs along the boardwalk.

Oct. 18. Just before we came they had a terrible fire. So we are doing guard duty in quarters. Marion told the boys we carry guns, but we don't.

Oct. 31. Susan was seen out last night. There was a full moon.

Nov. 10. We had our dance last night. And we wore evening dresses, too. The officers thought the floor was good, though I don't see how they knew.

Dec. 10. Classes are in full swing, but "First in the hearts of the student nurses is bacteriology."

Jan. 1. New Year's dance last night. Moonlight waltz—confetti. Hand-shaking—horns. Some doings!

Feb. 1. Mary signed a pass for a patient yesterday. Funny thing—it wasn't questioned. But then the guards can't read English—not that Mary is English.

March 15. At last we are among the "best dressed women of the world." Probation is over. We have our street uniforms.

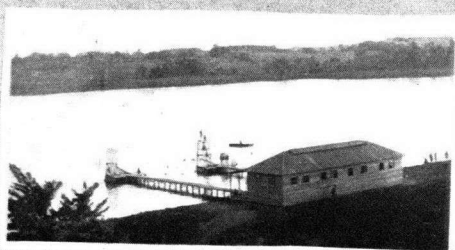

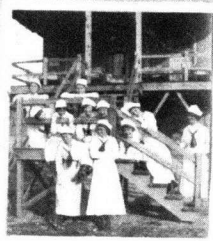

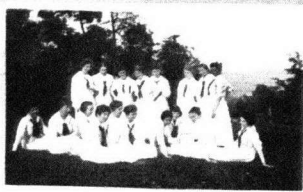

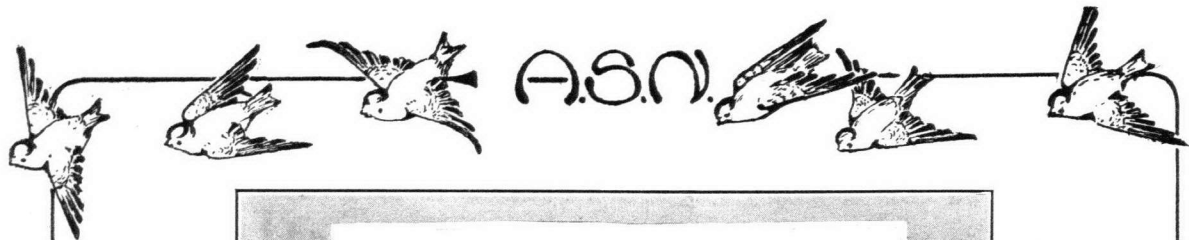

April 1. We made a pile of money last night at a carnival. Going to get a top for Maud. Who is Maud? How do we know; we never rode in her.

June 1.

Four little nurses, sitting 'neath a tree,
Along came a Major and then there were three.
Three little nurses, looking very blue;
A Captain toddled up and then there were two.
Two little nurses, feeling they'd been done;
But along came a Lieut. and then there was one.
One little nursie, ready for a cry;
Private saunters up—but he walks right by.

July 31. Good-bye, Colonia. We rode away in a horrid old bus—on our way to Fox Hills. One of the boys wrote such a sweet poem:

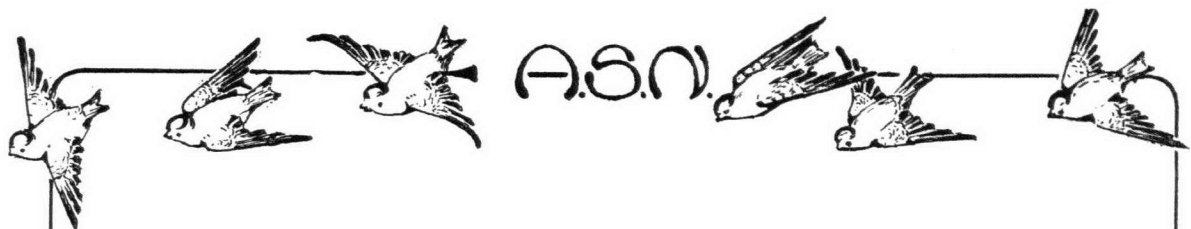

We miss our little Student Nurses,
Who carried on, 'mid Doughboy curses,
Brought on by ether's fumes;
Who toiled and cleaned and folded gauze,
And never faltered in the cause,
Who rose at dawn and studied late,
Few privileges they could rate,
For they were still in training.

History

The slanting rays of the October sun shone brightly, lighting up the little office of Quarters 1, where one by one thirty-seven girls reported for duty on the 21st day of the month, 1918. Just across the road from this stood the Mess Hall, where they were to assemble that evening to take the oath of allegiance, and where also they were to scramble onto the benches at the back of the room to eat their sweet potatoes and celery. A corridor led from this to their home, Barracks D, where each was to have her turn as M. P., seeing that the lights were out on time, quiet hour enforced, and the rules of the Student Government followed.

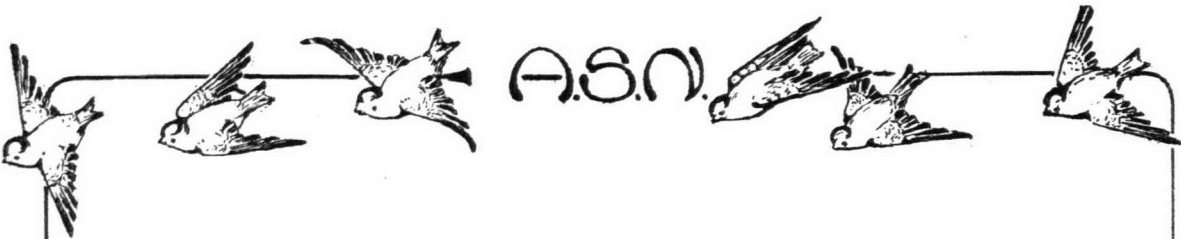

Owing to the influenza epidemic eight members of the class, as well as the Director, Miss Bessie Chaffee, were unable to answer the call until November 4. Consequently real class work did not begin until that time, although demonstrations and ward work, under the supervision of Miss Wessinger, began immediately. Miss Katherine Dougherty, Chief Nurse, and Col. Ernest E. Irons, Commanding Officer, took special interest.

Busy days passed, with drill under Captain Mennefee, skating on Eagle Lake, dances at the Red Cross House to the excellent music of the Base Hospital Band, and movies at the "Y" and "K. of C." as forms of recreation. Gradually, because of ill health, the call of the old life, or victims of Cupid, girls resigned until only twenty-six completed the probationary period. Following this came night duty in laboratory, operating room and the arrival of twenty "Bluebirds" from Camp Shelby, Miss. Then radical changes. Colonel Irons was transferred to the Surgeon-General's Office, the Base Hospital closed, and the original class was sent to Camp Sherman, Ohio, April 1st, leaving the remainder of the class with our Chief Nurse and Director to be sent to Fort McPherson, Ga.

A hot but pleasant summer was passed at Camp Sherman, with horseback riding, trips to the Pie House and Exchange Theater, walks over the hill and picnics by the Red School House in off-duty hours, until the middle of August, when division came because of affiliations.

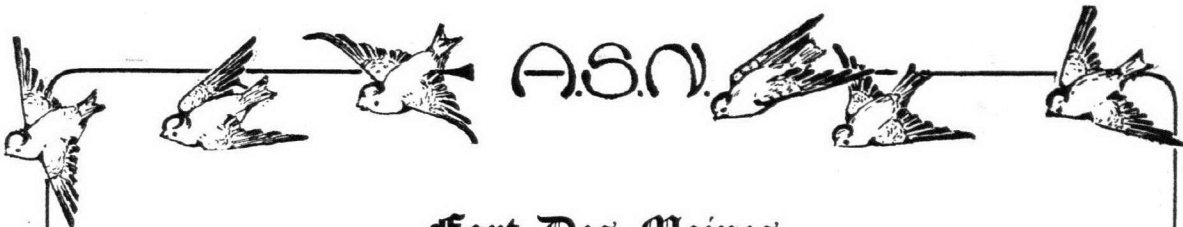

Three of the number were sent to Bellevue, N. Y., ten to Fort Sheridan, Ill., and thence to the University of Minnesota Hospital at Minneapolis, and the remainder to San Francisco, Cal., for their affiliations and Army work at the Letterman General Hospital. On this, the eve of graduation, one girl is doing private duty in Chicago, having finished the course January 21st, nine are in the West, and eight, the remainder of the class, are in New York and at the Walter Reed General Hospital. To the class many pleasant as well as unpleasant experiences have come, but none will hold such a hallowed place in the heart of each girl as those of Camp Custer at Battle Creek, Mich.

We wish to express our appreciation to our most highly esteemed Commanding Officer, Colonel Ernest E. Irons, and those who worked with him so loyally and patiently for the interest of our school.

Twenty-nine would-be students filled with enthusiasm at the thought of trying to do "their bit" by caring for "our boys" arrived at Fort Des Moines.

At the time the influenza was raging at its highest and we wondered "were we helpless or could we fight?" With eager determination we entered the ranks; the graduate nurses took us under their care and protection, teaching us patiently.

We soon became the happiest family, and when off duty we had jolly good times. The greatest comfort we possessed was the knowledge that each girl was doing her best and making good as a nurse.

The days went by very rapidly and with the joys of spring came the sorrows of our separations. This dates our Waterloo—twenty-one students resigned and only eight were left to start eastward for affiliations. Tears were shed, but we never knew for which—joy or sorrow.

Fort Des Moines

In Letterman, out in the West
We three should be happy, I guess,
But often we long
For those who belong
To Ft. Des Moines.

There were twenty-eight of us then.
Didn't know how happy we'd been
Till civie life did flirt
And they began to desert
Ft. Des Moines.

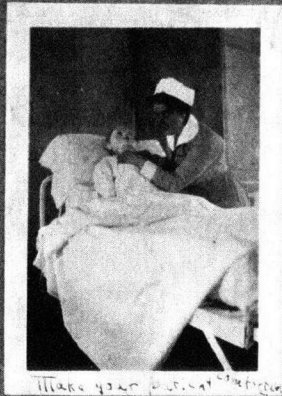

There were only ten of us left,
All sad. Of our buddies bereft,
Till the world we did grieve
When ordered to leave
Ft. Des Moines.

Now seven, we are in a fix,
Scattered from here to Camp Dix,
In New York, and D. C.,
One in Chi., and we three,
Thinking of Ft. Des Moines.

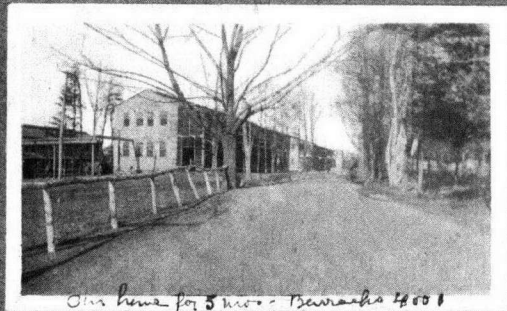

WE THREE.

Blessed be the day that brings
My laundry back to me,
And though 'tis torn in holes and strings,
It's welcome as can be.
For when I saw it leave me,
It gave me inward pain;
I little thought I'd e'er receive
It back from there again.

Camp Devens was the destination
Of the ninety girls, all keen
To do their share for the nation
In the summer of 1918.

A new experience awaited us,
Of service, sorrow and of trust.
The things we did, the friends we made,
Were all a part in the game we played.

Mistakes were many—disasters few,
In classes and lectures I mean,
Injunctions were given in water,
Hot compresses to glass eyes, too.

Perhaps the part we felt most
Was the splitting of the clan,
For April of 1919
Saw many of our Bluebirds disband.

Devens was to be our home
For only one short while,
Our training must be finished,
So away we went with a smile.

Every different affiliation
Was full of experiences new,
We lived in expectation,
Wondering where we'd be sent to.

Very soon our group divided,
We parted for different ways,
With our "Buddies" no longer by us,
We longed for the good old days.

Even now we think of the parties,
When our day's duty was done,
In our quarters on the hill,
And dear 4 or 1.

Nor shall we forget our instructors,
Who bore with us, patient and calm,
Helping us over the rough spots,
Helping us "Carry On."

So the three years now are behind us,
Since we started out so keen,
May we carry into the future
The Spirit of '18.

To the Director of our Unit, Mary M. Riddle

Miss Riddle opened one of the first branches of the Army School of Nursing at Camp Devens on July 24, 1918.

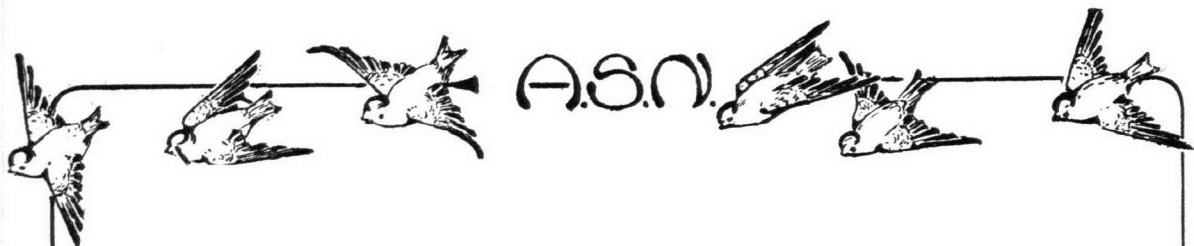

For us she embodied the highest aims and ideals of the nursing profession. She was to us perfect justice and truth, unselfishness, devotion to duty, heroism.

We are all proud of the privilege of having served under her. We shall be better all our lives for having known her.

Tales of Camp Dix

Camp Dix received its first class of sixty students in August. They came not a day too soon. After those fateful drives of July and August the hospital of two thousand beds received the inrush of American wounded, and on their arrival they were greeted by Blue-birds eager to help care for them.

Sixty strong was a brave beginning! Their number had dwindled to thirty-five when they were joined in January, 1919, by the second unit. The girls of the latter group had begun to fear that their chosen career of army nurse in the great war was closed to them. Fate, however, at last proved kind, and after four months of anxious waiting they received official orders to report to Dix. Sixteen responded with feminine pep and enthusiasm.

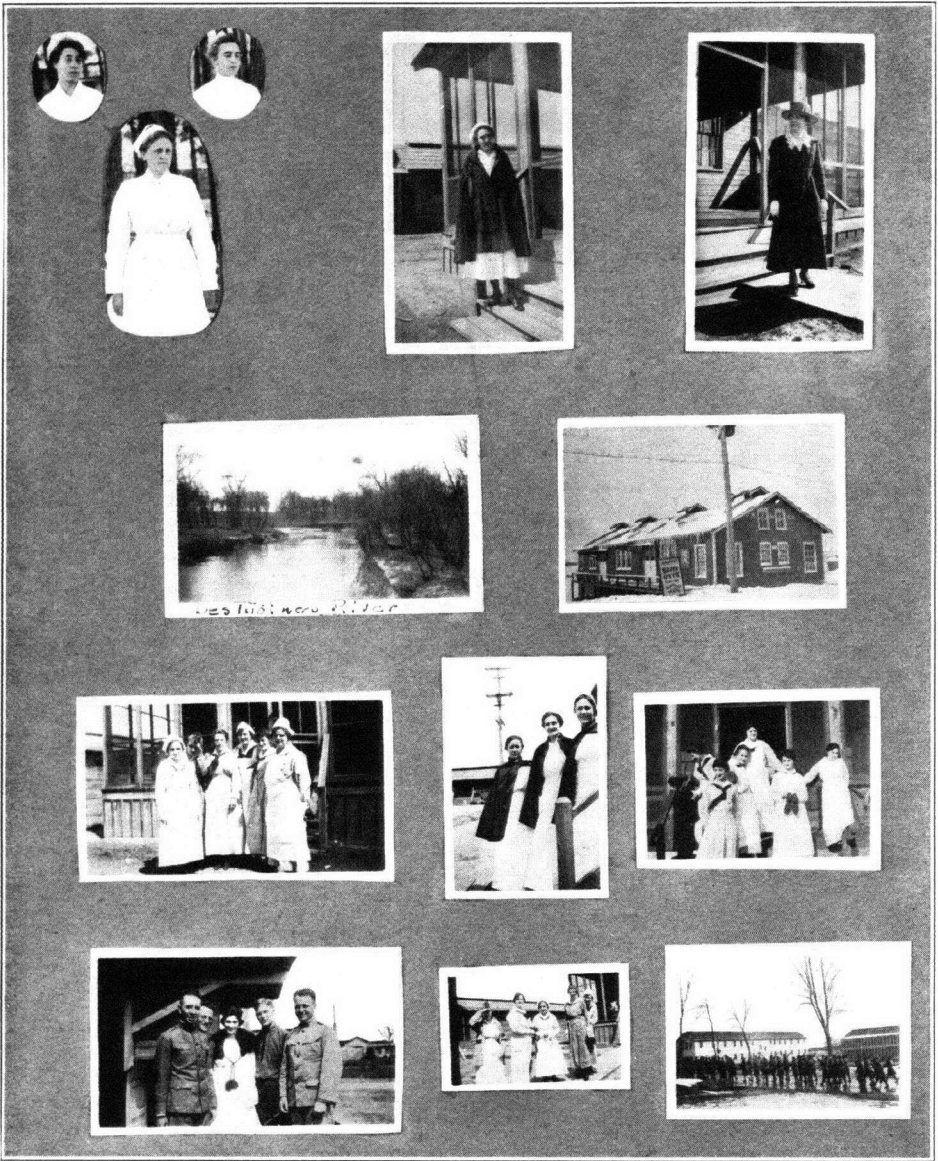

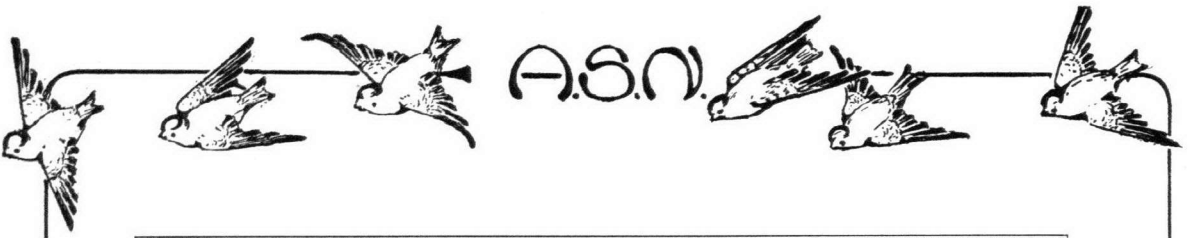

Those days in camp were days apart. We loved it from the first thrill of our cordial welcome at the station by Miss Milne, the head of our unit, followed by our first awe-inspiring drive to the Students' Quarters in a khaki car labeled "For official use only." Then came glorious months filled with real constructive work and daily inspiration. It was so good to be a factor, to share in the rehabilitation of the men of America! Never one hint of discouragement crept in to mar that time.

Even though Miss Milne's leave from the Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia was for only six months, she stayed with us long enough to establish a very sound foundation in our class work, and also in the larger ethical background which is so necessary for students beginning training to have. Her work was carried on by Miss Wray.

Someone has said, "Few people fail to live up to the standards set by appreciation and praise." We of Dix feel that the glorious ideals given us by Miss Wray were unequaled. She not only was to us a model of professional perfection, but so combined grace and understanding with real unselfishness and genuine interest in each student that she more than earned the title of our "Dix Mother."

Living in an Army dormitory may not be conducive to peace and harmony, but it is conducive to the formation of friendships of the sort that have knit us together for always. The remarks and snappy repartee of those early A. M. conversations scintillating from one end of the dorm. to the other included everything from Mac's dreams to a recitation of the bones of our anatomy. These were discussed amid frantic Marathons to the Mess Hall.

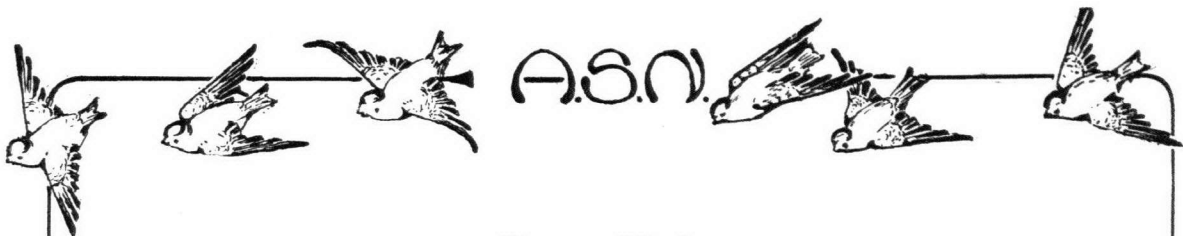

When our second section arrived at Walter Reed the Seniors of Dix were ready to welcome them as they had done nearly two years before. Civilian hospitals with their interests and trials lay behind. It was wonderful to get back to the Army, wonderful to get back to our boys, and most wonderful of all to spend the last few months together.

The Camp Dodgers

The Camp Dodgers dedicate these pages to Anna C. Garrett, our Chief Nurse, who is ever in our memory our highest ideal.

It is with the deepest affection and tenderest memories that we who have remained to the end look back upon the comrades of those anxious days, when with fear and trembling in our hearts, but with greater faith, we were united together by the greatest bonds—service to country.

An Ode to Camp Dodge

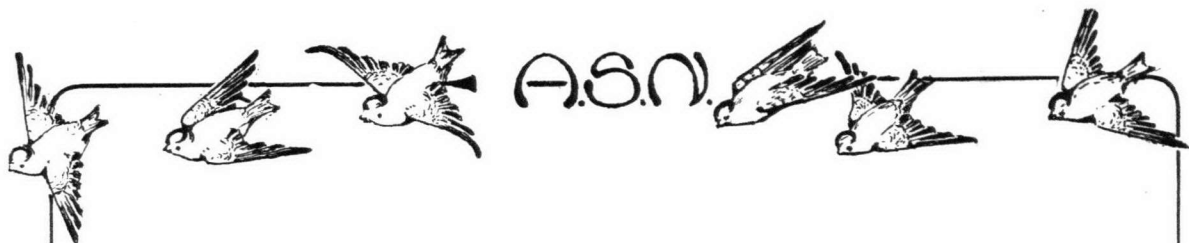

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of days past,
Memory recalls the day Camp Dodge, we sought
To don the nurse's cap, no more our time to waste;
And sometimes then our mind with thoughts doth o'rflood,
Of hours on duty, spent by day or night;
Or, dearer still, of many an evening stroll
To Y. M. or K. C. hut or Hostess House so bright.
Though years may swiftly come and swiftly go,
Though duty to lands far and wide may call,
Though time its tell-tale seams doth sew,
And to our lot new friends and fortunes fall,
Still, if the while we think of Camp Dodge days,
All present joys do fade, to sing their praise.

History

It was in November, 1918, that the first fifty-two girls arrived at that gray group of buildings perched on a wind-swept barren hill overlooking New York Harbor.

The hospital was then known as Debarkation No. 2, and it wasn't a cheerful place to be imagined with its low gray barracks and red clay grounds, but the welcome the students received from Miss Robinson, the chief nurse, made them at home immediately and they soon learned to love the hospital and its personnel.

They settled down to work with Miss Robinson, Miss Ashley and Lieut. Buckstein as an able faculty overseeing their studies. They were well on the road of learning and were doing such awe-inspiring things as giving "baths" and hypos and dressings when the Flu and twenty-five straggling new "probs" arrived to be taken in hand by Miss Elizabeth Ledger and Miss Shellabarger.

How they raved over their little cells; with what thrills they arose at reveille each morning to begin a day full of new experiences. With what envious eyes they gazed on the blue-lined capes which their Seniors had designed and wore with the approval of Miss Goodrich—the very first capes worn by any student group.

Their Seniors were loving big sisters to them and helped them over many a rough bit of road until they too began to acquire that confidence which comes from mastery of one's work. But it wasn't all work; there were many dances at the Red Cross and K. of C. huts chaperoned by Miss Parsons, who marshalled the girls home for their beauty sleep at promptly eleven o'clock. These dances followed the "coming out" party which was given by the Post to the first class when they finished their probation period. What a dance that was! Of course they wore their blue gingham. They always did at Fox Hills, even to the Colonel's balls.

There were picnics to the nearby beaches, bacon-bats on the hills and swimming every day in the lake just beyond the barracks; and, when the snow fell, such glorious hikes all over Staten Island. Such jolly sleigh rides, skating on the lake and cozy parties in the Recreation House around a roaring fire. Meanwhile so many things had changed, the hospital had become General Hospital No. 41 and had been transformed from a barren spot to a place surrounded by beautiful lawns and flower pots, and the students had come to the parting of the ways. It was a cruel parting when the first group affiliated, but it was softened by the "good-bye" picnic at New Dorp Beach. Everyone went. Students and friend supervisors piled into the huge Army trucks right in with the ice-cream tubs, jars of olives and hampers of sandwiches. From then on group after group left reluctantly for different affiliations, taking with them the Fox Hills spirit, which has somehow kept them mutually interested in one another and has made for a rather remarkable esprit de corps.

Camp Memories

The sunny South welcomed the fifty strange girls into their new experiences of army life, and interesting it was from the time of our arrival and the house-keeper's call to the office dog, "Oh, John, here's another one," and John's weary reply of "Oh, Lord," until we left some six months later with the jazz band playing, "We hate to leave you, we're so used to you now."

Some of the things we never shall forget:

Our first night in camp.

Our first enlightening talk on what and what not to do in this man's army.

The day we went on duty.

The first bath we ever gave.

The "medical Y" and "Dad," the host, whose youthful activities belied the years proclaimed by his silvery hair.

The road to Chamblee where we hied ourselves in quest of "hot dogs" or the goodies of the "Waffle Shop."

Stone Mountain.

Our first Christmas in an army camp.

How we looked with our ears uncovered to suit the fastidiousness of our supervisors.

"Goin' to town" in jitneys jammed with a most democratic mixture of nurses, officers and enlisted personnel.

"Call 240."

When we moved from Barracks B.

The picnic our C. O. gave us to celebrate our passing probation.

Captain Nowell and his vocabulary of professional terms. Samples: "Information" and "separation."

Some of our first charge nurses.

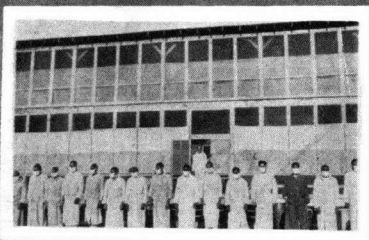

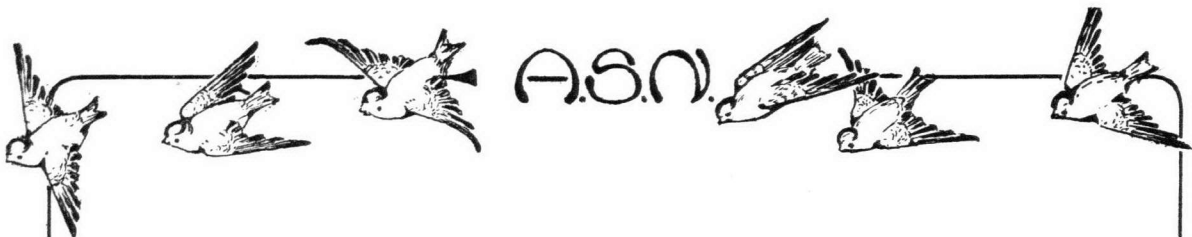

The kindly attitude of all the nurses in white.

Miss Oakes, Miss Blake and Fanny Lou.

Henry—"Me, too, and a cup of tea and a pillowcase."

Jimmy, who never hesitated to give us "seconds" on "eats."

April Fools' Day.

Camp Grant

Three miles from the city of Rockford, Illinois, on the banks of the beautiful Rock River, are located the hospital grounds of Camp Grant. Three separate groups of students were admitted to the ranks of the Army School of Nursing at this hospital. The first, thirty-four in number, arrived August fifteenth, nineteen hundred and eighteen. A month later came the second group, thirty-six in all while in November, the numbers were increased to one hundred and ten by the arrival of forty more girls. Definite plans had been formulated for training from a professional and a military standpoint, and the students were assigned to duty the day after their arrival. The first two groups aided very materially in the care of the patients during the epidemic of influenza, which raged at the hospital during the latter part of September and the month of October, and were given special commendation by the Commanding Officer of the hospital.

Class work, military drill, hikes and outdoor sports, dances at the Red Cross House, movies at Y and the K. of C. huts with an occasional journey across camp to the Liberty Theater and the Hostess House helped to fill in off duty time and the evenings. Special emphasis was placed upon military drill and each evening the students attended Retreat in company formation. The student body was divided into three companies. Each company elected its own officer from its own group and was divided into two platoons, each under the command of a lieutenant. They were given squad, battalion, company and athletic drill, and were outfitted in woolen uniforms, puttees and over seas caps on account of the severe winter climate. Daily drill under command of Lt. Col. H. C. Michie, was kept up until early spring. About one hundred and twenty hours were devoted to this course.

The Student Nurses' quarters consisted of four one story frame buildings located on the hospital grounds. The School Building, two stories high, was very near the nurses' quarters. The second floor consisted of class rooms where theoretical work was taught by Miss Melby, while the first floor was utilized for recreation rooms.

Gradual changes came in the ranks of the students as time went on because of ill health, a call of their old professions, and for various reasons, discharges were granted to many. During February and March new faces were seen; girls came to us from Fort Riley, Kansas and Camp Sheridan, Alabama, making a total of one hundred thirteen on duty April 1, 1919. On June 21st, the Army School at Camp Grant was closed and the remaining group of girls was sent to Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

Miss Williamson, our Chief Nurse, and Miss Melby, our Supervisor, were sent to Walter Reed, Washington, to accept similar positions. Since leaving our original camp many changes have occurred. Some nurses have graduated and have left the service, while others have answered the call of Cupid. To one and all we send our heartiest congratulations.

History

On September the sixteenth, forty girls were ordered to report to Camp Greene. One arrived on the tenth. She knew everything when the others came. They made caps and began classes. Then the "flu" came and taught them the meaning of work. The hospital doubled its number of patients. They were principally negroes and nobly withstood backrubs of ink and cough syrup.

About the first of December the second unit appeared. They were closely followed by the thrill of overseas patients. On February seventh the first unit left for Fox Hills and in March the second unit closed the hospital and tearfully departed for Colonia and Camp Upton.

A Song of Camp Greene

(With Apologies to Service)

It isn't the aprons we hate,

It isn't the caps we put on,

It isn't the shiftings of late,

Nor the sleepy feeling at dawn;

It isn't the waiting in line

For a slice of pork and a spud;

No, it isn't the Camp—

It's the pesky damp—

And the mud,

mud,

mud.

It isn't restrictions we mind,

They often are blessings for sin—

Especially when, an hour before ten,

A basket of fruit smuggles in;

And it isn't inspection that keeps

Us wild in a positive pain;

It's the strafing we get,

When the weather is wet,

It's the rain,

rain,

rain.

It isn't because we are "Probes."

We don't like to chase into class,

It isn't because we don't know the law,

How to act when the white nurses pass,

It isn't the beds in the wards,

Make us long for the end of the day,

It's rubbers that stick

In stuff a foot thick—

It's only the clay,

clay.

clay.

Oh, the rain, the mud, and the clay.

The clay, the mud, and the rain;

With flood gates dispersing,

It's hard to learn nursing,

And take up our studies again;

With thick stuff all over our shoes—

With sky that's a-pouring a flood—

Sure the most of our woes,

As everyone knows—

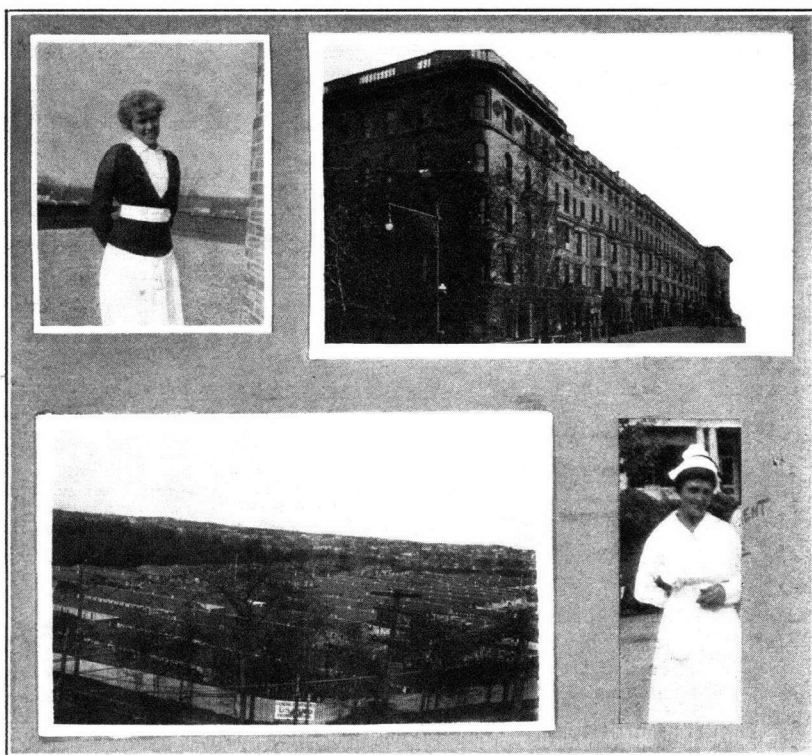

Are the rain,

the clay,

the mud.

A Tribute

To Miss Uzelmeier we owe much. She took us, a group of willing but untrained girls, from many states, and taught by example and word that the only woman worthy of the name of Nurse is one who thinks more of what she can give those in need of her services, than the material returns she may get for them; that the watchword of the profession is unselfish service. She seldom praised but she was ever just. She was and is our friend and she has proven to be an inspiration to many of us.

We of the Gun Hill Road Unit began our training rather differently from the other students. We were sent to Teachers' College, Columbia University, for our probation, instead of starting at a camp. For the successful completion of those first months, we owe unfailing gratitude to our director, Mrs. Barnes, who tirelessly surmounted the many difficulties of housing, feeding, teaching, and transporting forty girls in a big city fully an hour's travel from the hospital where our practical work took place. She was indeed equal to every emergency, for, after three months in town, twenty-five of us were moved to General Hospital No. 1 (Gun Hill Road) and became qualified student nurses.

Here we were constantly in contact with the finest exhibition of high morale and true spirit of '18 which it has been our privilege to meet in training. In spite of severe suffering, countless inconveniences and annoyances, these boys, who had given so much, continued to give daily, to us, the living example of their fine courage. We were fortunate indeed, to learn so early the splendid reward of service.

Mrs. Barnes was now our Chief Nurse, so Miss McConkey came to be our guardian, and how much she helped us through the first months, which sometimes we found a bit hard, would be difficult to express. Had it not been for her cheery smile and helpful words there would surely have been blue-birds with drooping wings many times.

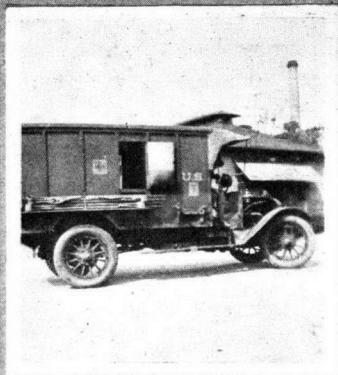

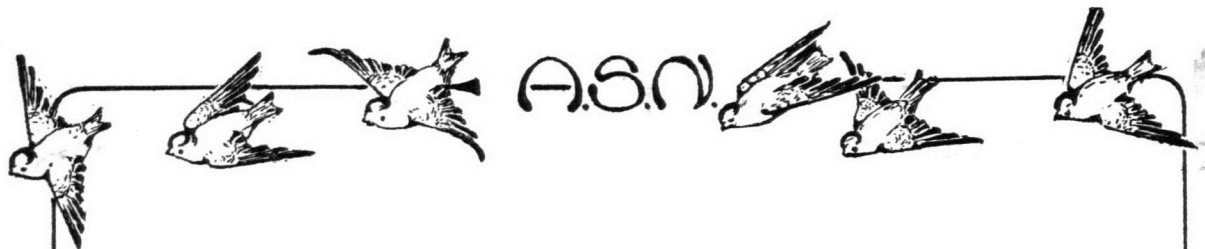

All too soon affiliations came and broke up our happy home, but the twelve of us who remain have fortunately been reunited at the Walter Reed Hospital.

To the Future

On the Closing of General Hospital No. 1 (Columbia War Hospital, Gunhill Road, the Bronx, New York)

By D. G. H., R. N.

The gates are shut; the white, sun-checked wards
Lie cold and empty. In the silent square
The last retreat has sounded; everywhere
The weary rain drips greyly from the boards.
And we, who knew there agony, and laughter,
Good new-made friends, and wondering first breath
Of living, born again undreamed, from Death,
Kindred in these for all our days hereafter,
We have been scattered. With the dulling years
These open wounds will heal, these buildings rot,
But this strong fellowship will never die,
Of youth and pain, but, acid carved, appears
An etching on each memory, cleanly wrought
Like trees at evening 'gainst a windless sky.

Camp Hancock, Georgia, stood on a hill-top screened by an enchanted wood of true Georgia pines.

Student Nurse was the magic pass-word which admitted to its portals a group of forty-eight seekers for knowledge and adventure, all filled with patriotic fervor.

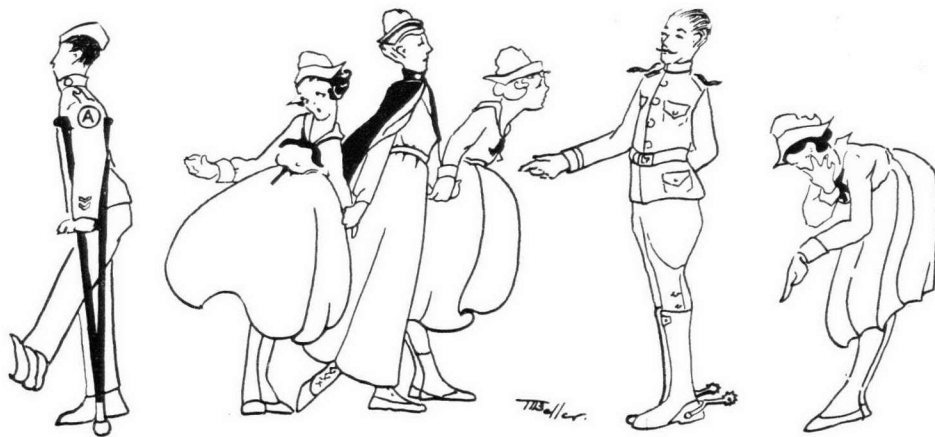

Once within its portals they were bound by solemn oath to perform all tasks assigned them, for as in all enchanted countries great reward must be won by valorous deeds.

First came the "Trial of Endurance;" each girl unflinchingly extended her arm for a wondrous needle whose prick, it was assured, would protect her from the evil influences of two great dragons, Typhoid and Smallpox. Thus armed they applied themselves diligently to their hand books, and became skilled in the art of battling with the great armies of Disease and Dust.

The first serious encounter was with a great ogre called "Flu" who, with Disease and Dust, was depleting the population of their beloved land.

They found it was a great advantage during their advance on the enemy, to neither look at privates nor officers, but press steadily ahead with only their object in view, and discard entirely their old weapons, eyes, smiles and dimples, with which they had been wont to conquer.

The enemy routed, they bade farewell to Camp Hancock, and went to answer the call of another and more needy realm, Fort McPherson. Here they labored faithfully and well, till the signing of the armistice relieved some from emergency service, and the majority of the students returned to their original pursuits, leaving only seven to pursue the Way of Adventure, and learn the mysteries of affiliations, special services and graduation.

LETTERMAN GENERAL HOSPITAL

1921.

Camp Kearney

San Diego, California
Representative, FRANCES FARNER

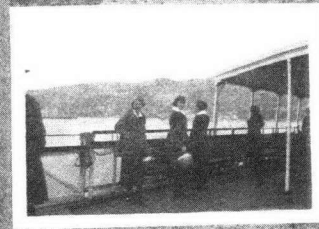

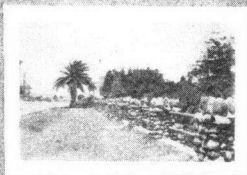

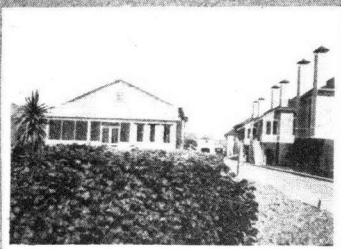

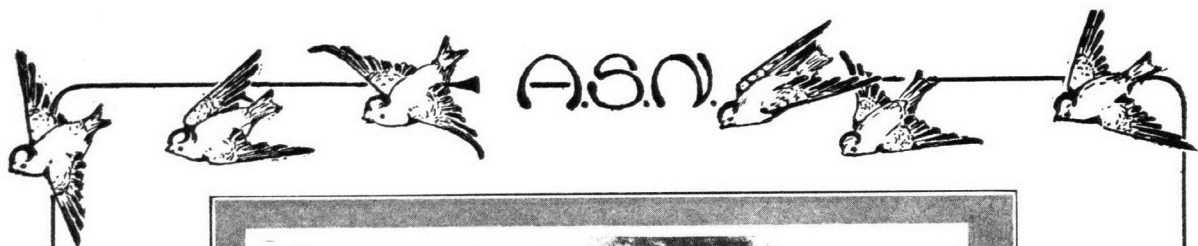

Contrasting strangely with the lazy atmosphere of Southern California, Camp Kearney, like a lusty mushroom, sprang up overnight. But the contrast between military Regime and romantic traditions of Spanish occupation was not more sharp than that between thirty "Rookie Nurses" and a well-regulated Base Hospital. On a Saturday, the last of October, thirty student nurses were admitted to a strictly quarantined camp and were forbidden to leave until the "Flu" was under control. To say that our welcome was frigid is not a criticism of those in charge, because it seemed nothing less than a calamity to have a group of young spirited and utterly untrained women to contend with along with the tragic struggle against influenza. As soon as we proved our seriousness of purpose we were given full credit and just appreciation.

The need for nurses was vital and after a cursory examination we were at once placed upon the wards. Ours was a curious personnel. One girl was a musician, a violinist, whom the war had prevented from completing her studies in Europe. Another was a butterfly thing from the Middle West. A quaint little Southern girl drawled her way into the hearts of patients and superiors alike. One among us had sold her personal jewelry to buy uniforms and transportation for which an opposing family had refused to furnish money. The rest were direct from schools and colleges, either as students or teachers, and a few of us had had the opportunity to work before this time.

The process of adaptation was not always easy. We, who had always considered free speech an inherent right, were forbidden to talk to patients. We, who had always gone blithely on the precept that all men are created free and equal, suddenly discovered that we had superiors in the presence of whom we must stand. We, who had supposedly reached the age of discretion when we might choose our mode of living, found that we retired and rose by rule, ate by rule, studied by rule, and lived according to a strict military regime. We gradually learned, that in so vast a system, individual personalities must be more or less stereotyped in order that the greater personality of the whole might have unity.

One of the most delightful things about such an experience is the sincere feeling of friendship which permeates the group. Though many of the students resigned after the armistice was signed and the remainder of the group was sent to Letterman General Hospital and amalgamated with the group from other camps, there is a bond between the Camp Kearney "Rookies" that each will remember as long as she lives.

(The Camp Kearney Girls were the first of the Letterman Group.)

During the war Letterman General Hospital nestling below the pine covered hills of the Presidio, was blissfully unaware of Army Students. But it was not to remain so long, for in March, '19, Camp Kearney students, nineteen strong, likening their coming to Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade" descended upon it. They were so charmed with the hospital and its surroundings, that they were calling themselves "Letterman students" by the time thirty-four Camp Lewis girls invaded the hospital in April.

A sun-burned group from Camp Dodge came in July, revelling in the agreeable coolness of the trade winds. Nineteen Camp Sheridan girls broke the monotony of the long month of August, and it seemed that the "Meltingpot" must be almost full, but the next year brought students from Ft. Sam Houston, and later on from Ft. Sheridan. Since then a few stragglers have found their way across the bay to become a part of the small army of blue clad nurses at Letterman.

Retreat

The line is formed, the band arrayed,
The officers are on the right,
The nurses have the center made,
Enlisted men complete the sight.

Awaiting shortly, as is meet,
They now can hear the first command,
Promptly shifting hands and feet
At "Parade Rest" they calmly stand.

I often wonder if alone
To me, as when I hear the strain,
The bugle says: "The day is done,
You soon can dream of peace again."

The evening sky, the sunset glow,
Some bugle sounding far away,
Seem often then o'er my soul to throw
A calm that quells the strife of day.

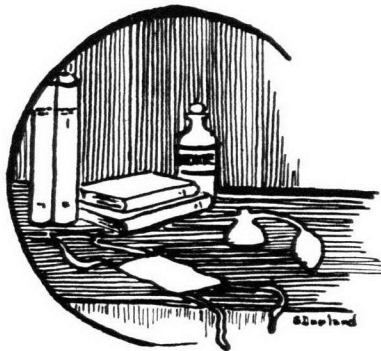

Then wakened from such reverie,
By stern command, "Attention," given,
Brings poise of keen expectancy,
With arms at sides and feet brought even.

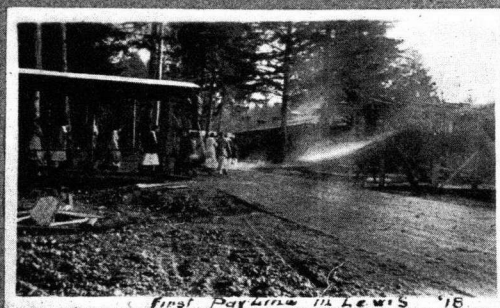

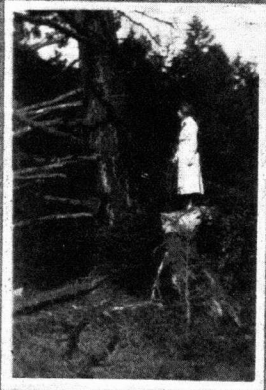

"Sound off" and lo, the band now plays,
"Star Spangled Banner" is the strain:
The flag which from the mast yet waves
Comes down by slow degrees again.

Oh, tell me, ye who souls can test,
Why, when our country's anthem's played
Emotions deep steal through my breast—
Emotions only love hath made.

Retreat is over! But I leave
With feelings love of country made,
Such as compelled us to achieve
The victory and peace we prayed.

In the farthest corner of the great Northwest, splashed by the gentle waters of Puget Sound and guarded by the snow-capped peaks of Mount Rainier lies Camp Lewis, the largest training camp in the United States.

Eighty-five young women were summoned to camp, called chiefly from the Western and Middle-Western states. The first arrived October 5th and the last during the latter part of the month.

Taught, trained, admonished and encouraged by our beloved supervisor, Miss Sarah Harris Smith, and helped by our head nurses, within five months we were considered dependable enough to be trusted on duty alone.

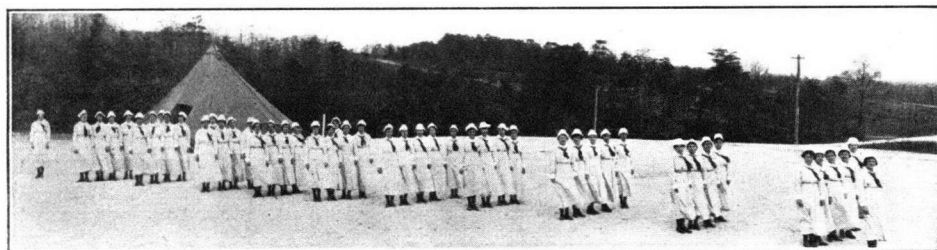

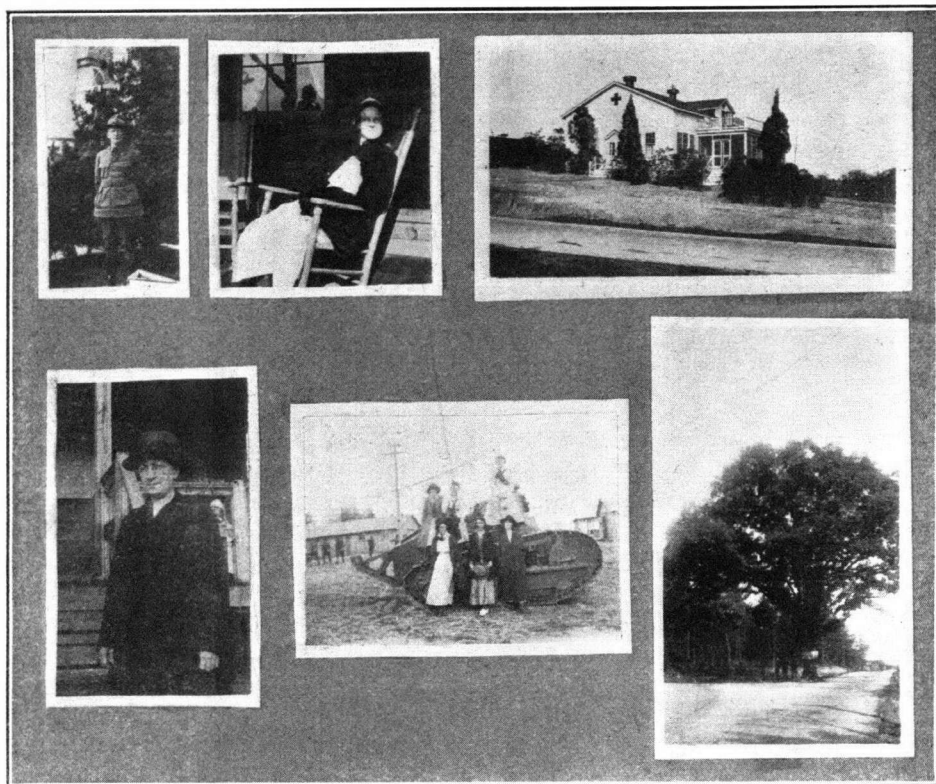

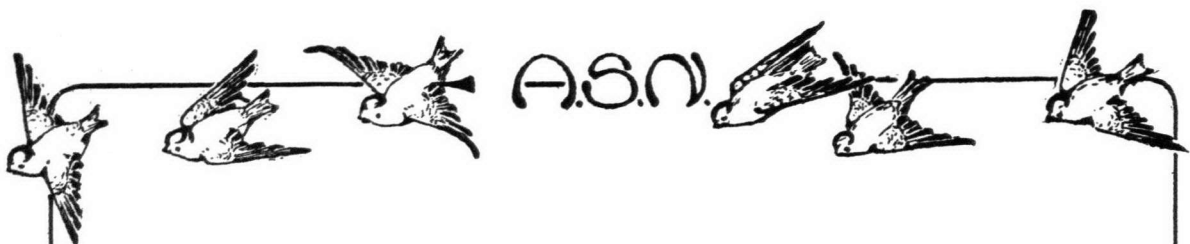

On April 15th our Chief Nurse received orders for our transfer to Letterman General Hospital. This news filled us with grief and consternation. How could we leave Camp Lewis, the scene of our first efforts and accomplishments, the inspiration of our highest ideals and devotion, self-sacrifice, and nursing service. This was to us the Army School of Nursing.

There had always been a wonderful spirit of coöperation between the graduate and student nurses, and this was reflected in the sentiment of the farewell dinner which the members of the A. N. C. gave in our honor the evening prior to our departure.

We bade goodbye to our friends with deep regret, and left Camp Lewis with saddened hearts. It was hardest to say farewell to our Chief Nurse, Miss Margaret Wilson, for we owed much to her. We were happy to take with us our Supervisor, Miss Smith, to start us safely in our new location.

So it was that we left Camp Lewis April 23, 1919, and found ourselves two days later looking across the great bay of San Francisco toward our new home. We entered the beautiful grounds of the Presidio and became part of the Letterman group, losing our identity as the Lewis Unit.

But no—for there exists a bond that will ever unite us, something we have together that no one else can share. For but let hardship or misfortune touch one of us, and lo the magic circle! It draws us close together; standing hand in hand with loyalty and affection—THE LEWIS BAND.

The memory of our three chief nurses, Miss Taylor, Miss Redford and Mrs. Burke, and our instructor, Miss Kennedy, will live forever in our hearts. To them and to the others at the Base we extend our sincerest thanks for their interest and kindly help.

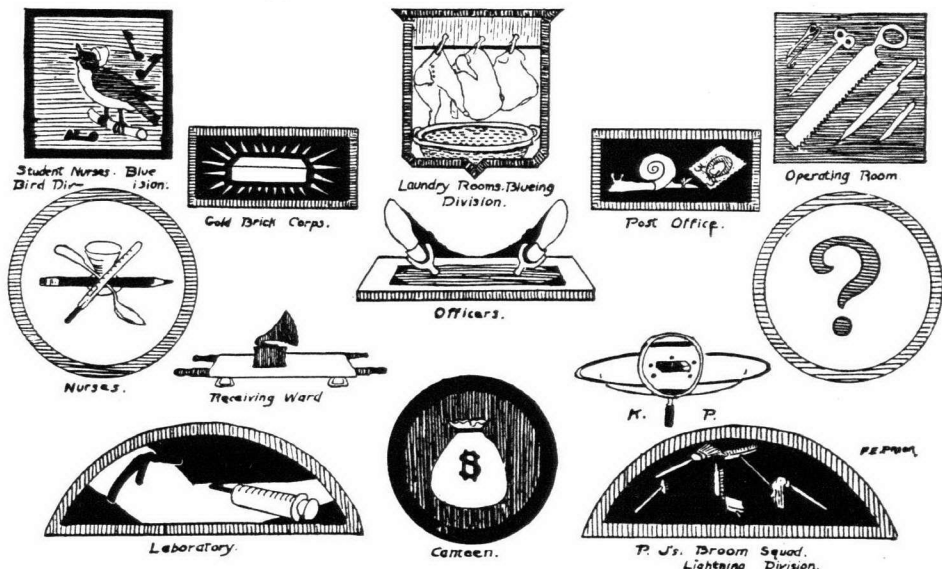

Strolling round the ward with dust pans,
Cleaning in the good old way,
Scrubbing all the beds and tables,
That's the way we earn our pay,
Washing all the patients' faces,
Dishing out the chow and feed,
Oh, we're nurses in the U. S. Army
And we're at Camp Meade.

Camp Meade at Letterman

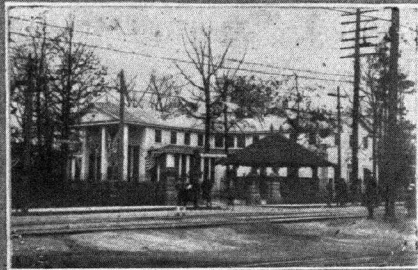

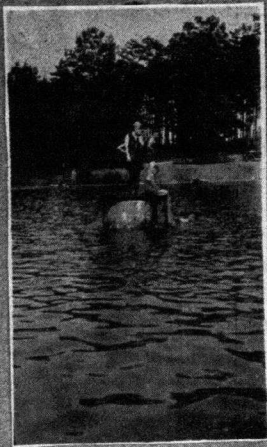

There are only three of the original "Camp Meaders" here, and we are a mighty happy "triplet."

Eleanor Lowell was the first one to "Go West," then came Elinor Parker and later Elizabeth Stallman. We are simply crazy about Letterman and wish all our dear old gang could be in this glorious spot. Don't you all wish we could tramp down to the hostess house at Camp Meade together; go to the movies at the "Y"; then swing back to quarters arm in arm, as we used to do? We wouldn't even mind one of those Maryland sand storms, would we?

November twenty-fifth marks the date when we, a group of fifty-one girls, assembled at Fort McPherson to begin our course in nursing. Twenty-six of our group were from Wisconsin. Our first camp days were spent in getting acquainted with one another, with our supervisors, Miss Stevenson and Miss Cameron, and with the many rules and regulations. Classes began immediately and we were kept busy from morning until night. Shall we ever forget the first day on the wards! How we all started from the nurses' home and walked around the big parade grounds to our respective wards? We stayed only two hours on duty the first day, but we found the work so interesting that we were glad when the time was lengthened.

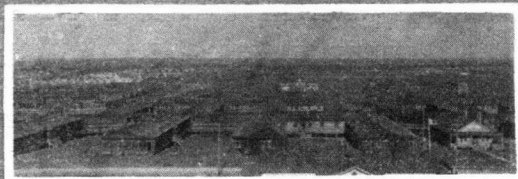

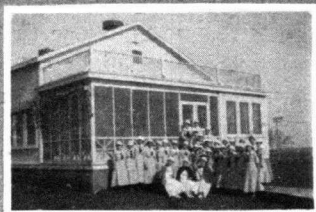

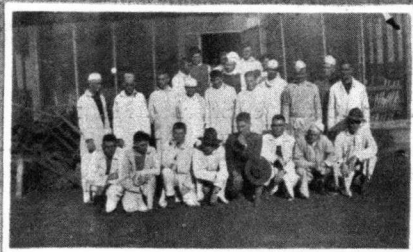

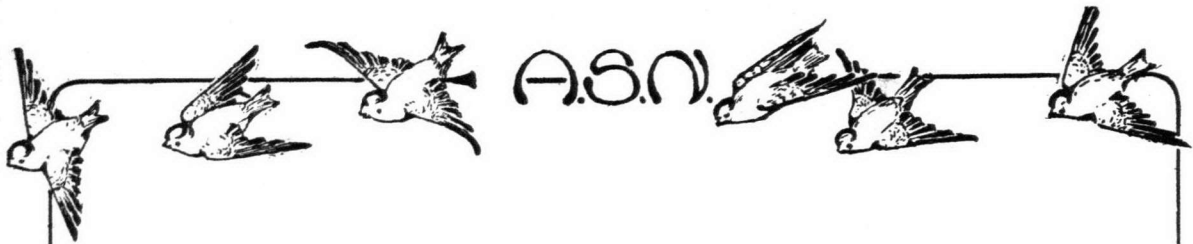

Our smooth green parade grounds proved to be the center of our out-of-door activities. Here we had tennis courts, golf links, a baseball diamond, and our beloved air dome where four times a week we enjoyed concerts given by a thirty-piece orchestra, and followed by moving pictures. It was here, too, that we drilled for six weeks. We also had a splendid swimming pool just a short distance from the nurses' home.

A half mile away was a German prison camp with one thousand prisoners, a veritable little city behind high wire fences. One night we were very much alarmed because twenty prisoners had tunneled under the wires and escaped into the woods only to be caught and returned again to the camp.

Our number gradually decreased until in the fall of 1919 there were but twenty-two left. Twelve of this number were sent to New York to affiliate and the remaining ten to Fort Sheridan. At the present time there are fifteen still in service who are gradually drifting to Walter Reed.

Mere pen will never tell the thrills and fun of the Student Nurses who started at Camp McClellan.

We ask if any reader thinks that if she were classed among and given the following:

The Spirit of 1918
Forty-six American Girls
Good quarters
Good food
The best of patients
Some of the finest women for our
Instructors and Chief Nurses
Lenient and kindly Medical Officers
Recreation of all kinds,

could she be other than happy and contented? This was the spirit at our camp.

We Stay

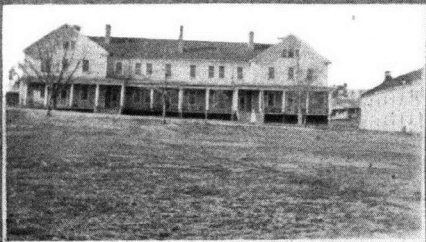

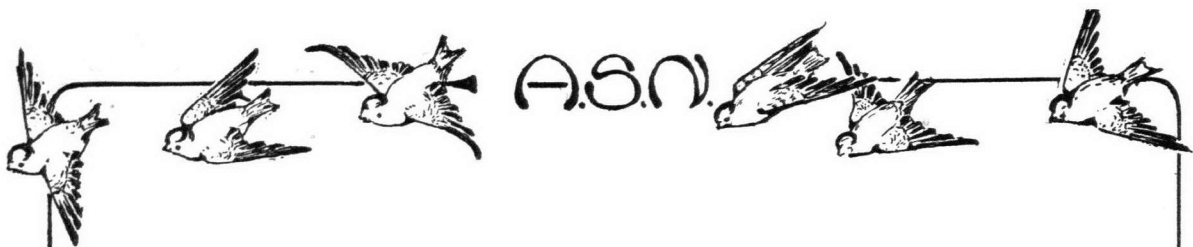

When under storm of shot and shell,
So many wounded, bleeding, fell,
And call for nurses more and more
Re-echoed still from shore to shore;
With years, perhaps, of war ahead—
With nurses numbered 'mong the dead,
With duties multiple in view—
To bear the load, they were too few.

And then, a group unknown to fame,
The Army School of Nursing came,—
A group of girls from near and far
To do their part to win the war.
From home and college, school and play,
From plowing corn or raking hay,
And vowed, though skies should fall above her,
She'd help the grads. to put it over.
She'd fetch and carry, clean and scuttle,
Move here and there, just like a shuttle;
She'd put her shoulder to the wheel,
And if her senses seemed to reel,
She'd merely take a tighter grip,
Upon herself and let things rip.

Then soon the armistice was signed—
No need to call that day to mind,
But many a "blue-bird" felt that she
A student nurse could cease to be—
Take up the work she'd done before,
The army needed her no more.
But others having tried the work,
And having no desire to shirk,
Have stuck, and mean to keep it up,
In nursing fields to try their luck;
Knowing full well the wealth it brings
Is not that of material things,
But feeling each should have a place
That is her own, in life's great race.

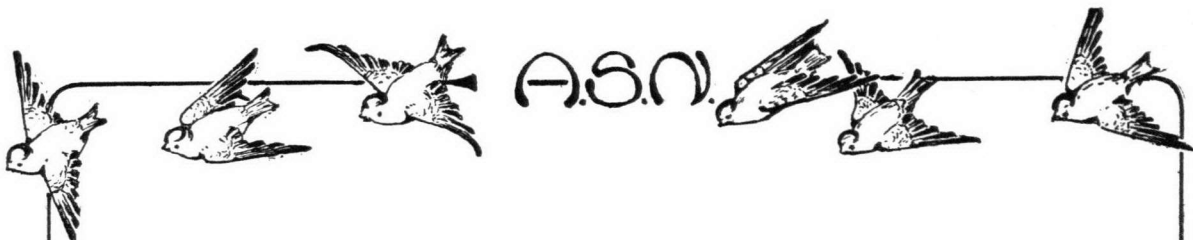

We stay. No longer "rookies" we,
A mile-stone we have passed; and see
What it has taught us! Countless are
The problems we have puzzled o'er.
Tonight, we would not seek to press
The learning we know less
Than you. Believing that the teaching old
Of nonsense for the wisest holds,
That cares of life are thus made light,
We bring you not much else tonight.

The Pilgrims' Progress

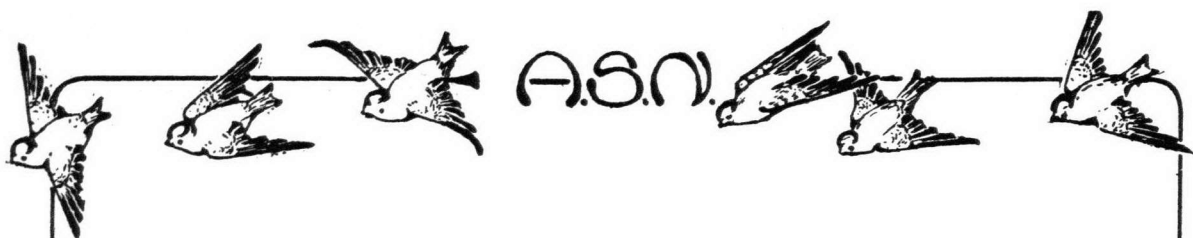

And it came to pass that on a certain day in December about two years ago, a band of pilgrims started on a journey through the desert in quest of the "Land of the Graduate Nurse." The oasis from which the caravan began its tedious journey was known as Fort Oglethorpe. It lay in a circle of purple hills over which the sun came creeping in the morning.

We spent four months in this quiet beauty, in preparation for our journey. In accordance with the customs of the desert, the forty-eight pilgrims gathered together the necessities for their trip. Their camels were arranged with Practical Nursing leading the caravan, his blanket bedecked with bits of Materia Medica. Anatomy, another trusty leader, followed, and after came Bacteriology, Experience, Common Sense and many more. Strenuous days of toil were lightened by dancing and feasting in the evening. Often the pilgrims were entertained by looking upon mirages—movies we should call them. Many helpers were with them who had already seen the promised land, and their words of wisdom anent the easiest ways of travel were hailed with greatest joy.

Finally the day arrived when everything was in readiness to move and twenty-three pilgrims mounted their camels and jogged away. After a day and a night they arrived at oasis Camp Meade which, although new, contained many similar plants and foods. There was the Dakin's Vine, with its little tubules of liquid, the Cresol plant and the cocoanut tree, its fruit filled with the milk of human kindness. Here too, there was much gaiety and after four months they bought new camels and when they learned their ways, moved on.

Only seventeen followed their quest, soon arriving at a wonderful spot called Walter Reed, and with eleven more pilgrims are still jogging on confident that after the sand storms of doubt have passed, and the wells of knowledge drained, they too, will find the reward at the end of their journey.

Fort Riley Days

In the memorable fall of 1918 there gathered from far and near a motley assortment of girls, just plain girls one would have called us, but no, we were teachers, business girls, college girls, music students, girls from every walk of life, all responding to the same appeal, all cheerfully laying aside our former hopes and ambitions to answer our country's cry for help.

Each train to Fort Riley unloaded fresh arrivals, who viewed with some misgivings the great stone buildings, the long rows of wooden barracks, the tents, and everywhere men in khaki bustling about hither and thither. We felt ourselves in the land of the unknown and a mysterious feeling crept over us of great anticipation mixed with a little awe and just a bit of fright. What lay before us? What was to happen to us?

That first month was rather hard. The "Flu" was waging its deadly war. The ambulance made its daily or semi-daily trip to our quarters and carried off sometimes one, two, and three of our members. Four of our little band never returned. Our acquaintance with them was brief but still our work had, in even so short a time, drawn us closely to one another and they were greatly loved and missed by all.

Do you remember that famous morning of November eleventh? I mean very early, say about three A. M. Our summons came over the telephone to stand at attention and sing "The Star Spangled Banner" in celebration of the Peace Declaration. Obediently we gathered on the stairs in strange and hasty attire, clad in bath robes of every kind and color and with a curler now and then protruding from underneath a lacy cap. But shivering though we were, how rigidly we stood with hand correctly poised and how lustily we sang until the wondering officers and graduate nurses were aroused from their slumbers by the resounding tones. Not until the next day did we learn that the order had been given, not by the Chief Nurse, but by our plotting comrades next door.

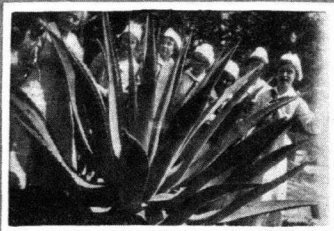

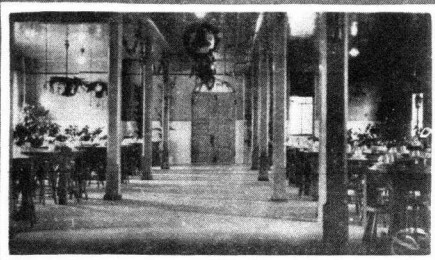

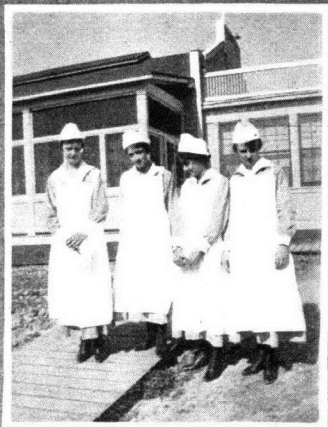

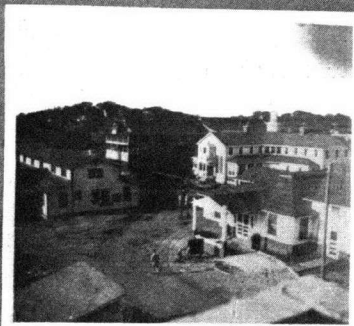

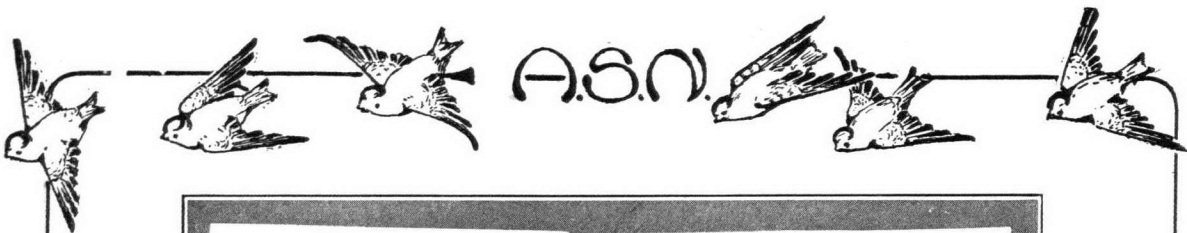

And then in March came an end to it all. Some were sent to Camp Grant to further serve their country, and others returned to the old life, the old ambitions and the old dreams. Each went with a broader vision, a million memories both sad and sweet, and with the thought that the friendships formed at Fort Riley were truly everlasting.

Inspired by the Valentine and epistle of the Student Nurse, Captain Adams, Instructor in Anatomy at Fort Riley, waxed eloquent in the wee hours of the morning and produced the following:

GREETINGS

To the student nurses, one and all,
I surely enjoyed your valentine call,
The candy—it was mighty fine,
And my massiters certainly worked overtime.

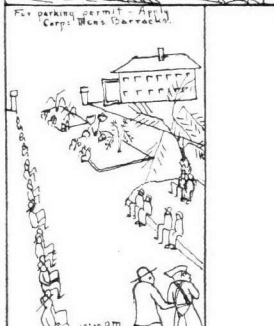

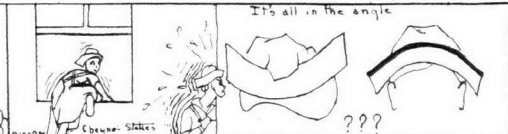

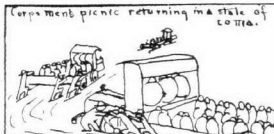

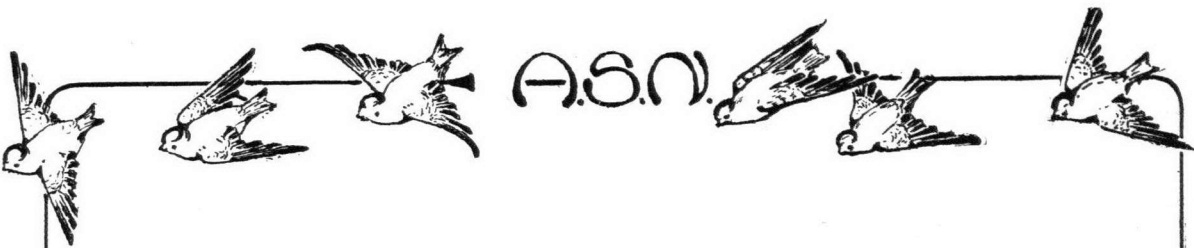

So please accept my heart-felt thanks
For the wonderful spirit shown in your ranks;
But, alas, I regret to say,
That the quizzes will be held every day.

The month of October brought thirty-five students to Camp Sevier, South Carolina. Miss Milliken, the Chief Nurse, gave us an enthusiastic welcome, and it was not long before our Commanding Officer, Colonel Pressly, gained our love and confidence. Miss Beaty and Mrs. Finberg added their interest, creating an atmosphere of happiness as complete as that of a family circle.

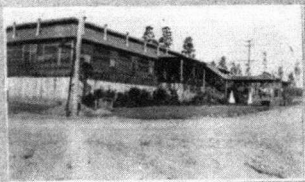

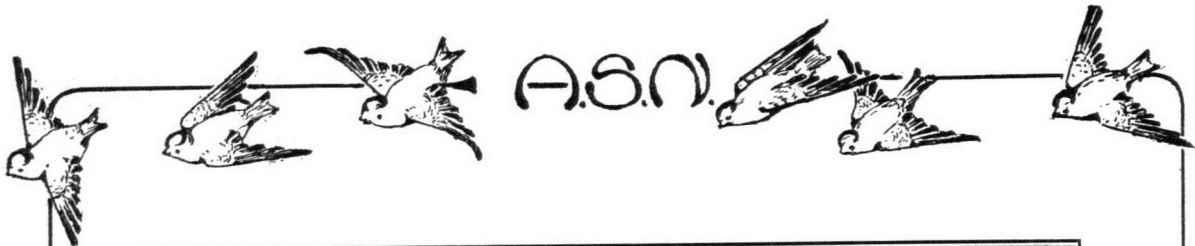

At the end of a week we put on our long blue dresses and white caps. This, of course meant duty and the realization of the longed for opportunity of serving suffering humanity. But it was hard for us to understand that that dream was to be accomplished by making empty beds and cleaning tables.

Early in March twenty-five of us were accepted and on the fifteenth of the same month we were transferred to Camp Taylor. At this point began the era of affiliation bringing separation in its wake. Now, at Walter Reed, at the close of our training there will be eleven girls, representing Camp Sevier to graduate from the Army School of Nursing.

"Twelve Little Blue-birds"

Twelve little blue-birds, all of them from heaven,
 One was late for roll-call and then there were 'leven.
 'Leven little blue-birds walking in the glen,
 Along came a doughboy and then there were ten.
 Ten little blue-birds, standing proud and fine,
 One married a "shave-tail," and then there were nine.
 Nine little blue-birds, staying out late,
 One got caught, and that left eight.
 Eight little blue-birds, one went to Camp Deven,
 After she departed, then there were seven.
 Seven little blue-birds (cunning little chicks!),
 A rich patient plucked one, and then there were six.
 Six little blue-birds then promised not to wive,
 But one got lonesome, so that left five.
 Five little blue-birds, mopping up the floor,
 One kissed a corpsman and that left four!
 Four little blue-birds, wishing they were free,
 One of them got her wish, and then there were three.
 Three little blue-birds, with all the work to do,
 So one went home to mother, and that left two.
 Two little blue-birds, cussing at the Hun,
 Which pleased a wounded buddie, and that left one.
 One little blue-bird, waiting all alone,
 I'd like to ask her "Would Yuh?" but she has a heart of stone.
 I've got to have a blue-bird—no other one will do,
 So, nurse, Oh, won't you have me? for the one I mean is you!

In September, 1918, in answer to the country-wide call for nurses, forty-nine girls, from twenty different states, assembled at Camp Shelby, Miss. They laid aside the habiliments of home, school and office and, uniformed in blue, proclaimed themselves ready to take up the tasks, both arduous and pleasant, which make up a nurse's training. After a month of class work, both theoretical and practical, they were at last assigned to ward duty, and joyfully did their share in the combat with the dread "flu" that swept the country.

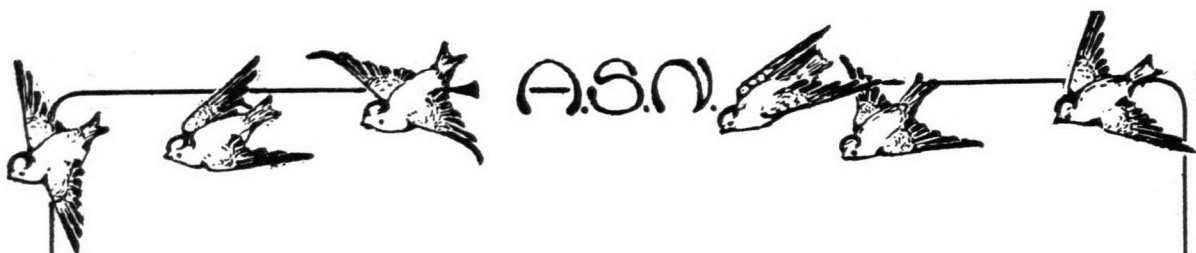

Not only to nursing did they apply themselves, for many happy hours were spent on the drill-field, on ambulance rides, hiking through the woods and at various parties and dances.

After the signing of the Armistice more than half the number went back to their former duties, and in February, 1919, the twenty-one who were left were transferred to Camp Custer, Michigan. Only a few months were spent there, then a second transfer took them to Ft. McPherson, Georgia, where they spent a busy, happy summer preparing for affiliations.

In October, fourteen of the original number were left. Nine were sent to Philadelphia and five to New York. Of the five, one slipped away, leaving in the hearts of her classmates a loving memory of one who was "faithful unto death."

Now Commencement drawing near finds nine of the Shelby group still in training, two in the west and seven in the east, eagerly looking forward to the day when they may face the world, equipped to do their best in the work they love to do.

My mind is full of a thousand of things,
Like class and drill and fallen kings,
But well I know the longed for day,
When the Student Nurses get their pay.

The Rally Southward

From the east, from the west,
From the north and south,
All into Camp Sheridan,
Rode the thirty students.
"Report to the C. O.'s Office,
"Go to the Chief Nurse," said he.
Thus, into the red tape of the army,
Walked the thirty students.

"On duty, student nurses!"
Was there a girl dismayed?
Yes, and the soldier knew some one had blundered.
But he never criticised,
For he fully realized,
That he must endure it,
On the wards of Camp Sheridan
Toiled the thirty students.

Soldiers to the right of them,
Soldiers to the left of them,
Soldiers in front of them,
Grinned and bore it.
Summoned often by call and bell,
Steadily they worked, and well,
Down in old Camp Sheridan,
On those hospital wards,
Toiled the thirty students.

Made all the beds in sight,
Scrubbed all the tables white,
Gave the baths all right,
Took the T. P. R.'s while
All the boys wondered.
Plunged into lectures daily,
Wrote their exams gaily.
Red Cross teas and parties
Lured the students now and then,
Chaperoned and Chaperoned,
Then they were transferred,
But not, not thirty students.

Soldiers to the right of them,
Soldiers to the left of them,
Soldiers behind them,
Were discharged and transferred.
When ward after ward was closed,
They that had tried their best,
Went to a camp in the great Middle West,
Up from the sunny south,
All that was left of them,
Left of the thirty students.

When can they, their first camp days forget?
O the happy days without regret!
All seemed so wonderful.
They answered to the Spirit of 1918,
They answered to the need of the heroes you've seen.
Those Camp Sheridan Students.

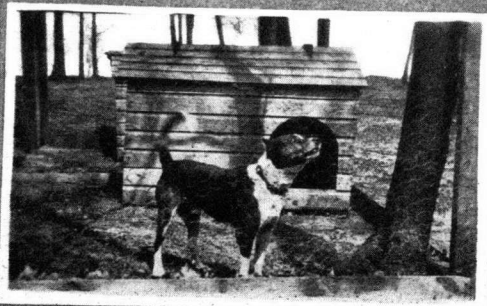

A Memory

We remember, we remember, dear old Camp Sheridan,
Somehow it means a whole lot more than any other can.
We started there so bravely, tho' we didn't stay o'er long,
We never can forget it—if we do there's something wrong.

We remember, we remember, full many a chilly morn,
We had to rise at six o'clock, and wished we'd never been born.
Then beds we made, ten score and more, and more and more and more,
And found that making beds and beds, made backs most frightfully sore.

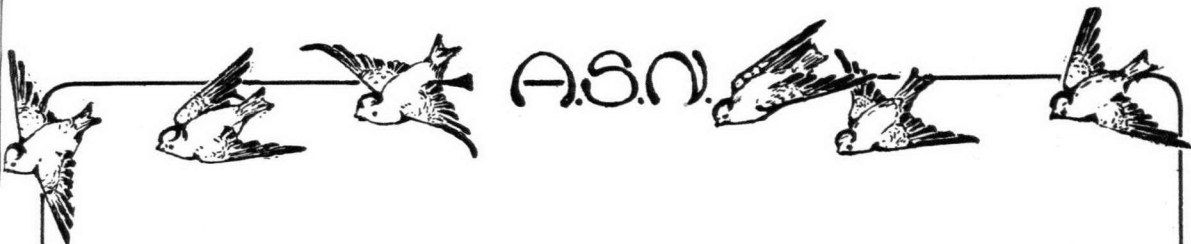

We remember, we remember, those funny Doctor men,
Who lectured us on bugs and bones as only Doctors can.
They caused us many troubled thoughts and most unpleasant dreams,
We even felt that polymorphs could make a humerus scream.

We remember, we remember, how loath we were to leave,
In spite of all the rules and work our eyes were dried with sleeves,
We've been lots and lots of places since we left Ole Alabam,
But it holds its place in all our hearts—Our own Camp Sheridan.

A little more than twenty-five miles north of the city of Chicago, situated on Lake Michigan, is Fort Sheridan, one of the most beautiful of the Army posts. The original reservation, consisting of six hundred thirty-two acres was conveyed to the United States by citizens of Chicago in 1886 in memory of General Philip Sheridan, a Civil War veteran, and was accepted as an Army Reservation in 1887. On September 19, 1918, it was chartered U. S. General Hospital No. 28.

In the center of the reservation stands the hospital, which consists of a large buff brick building connected by covered corridors with the temporary wooden structures or wards erected during the war emergency. It is furthermore surrounded by comfortable and attractive officers' homes which in 1919 were used as nurses' quarters. At this time the average capacity of the hospital was three thousand.

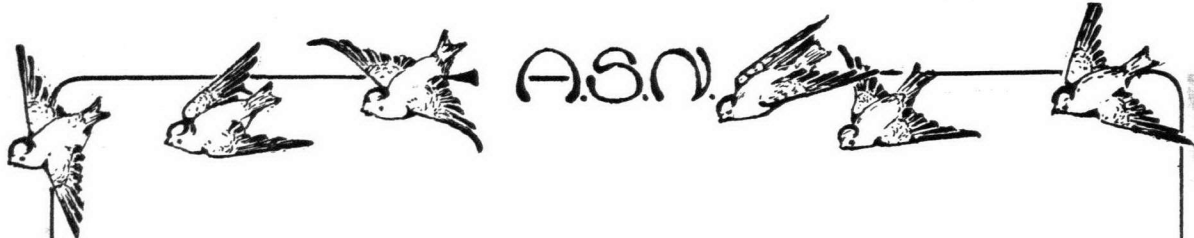

It was not until the spring of 1919 that the "blue-birds" of Camp Wadsworth, S. C., arrived at Fort Sheridan. They enjoyed the distinction of being the first student nurses at this fort. More nurses came from Camps Beauregard, Grant, Sheridan, Sherman, Custer, McArthur, McPherson, Taylor, Sevier, Meade, Jackson, Fort Riley, Fort Dodge, Fort Sam Houston and Fox Hills.

Lake Michigan added a great deal to the beauty and charm of the fort. Social activities of various types were planned for the nurses. Tennis, bathing and canoeing every day from June until September. Dances were given at the Nurses' Red Cross and at the Ball Room. In the summer evenings when the weather permitted some form of entertainment was given on the beach by the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., or Jewish Welfare Society. Beach parties were popular with their bonfires surrounded by groups of merry people. Mrs. Mason's Tea Room was patronized in the afternoons.

The year of 1920 brought many changes. In July the hospital was changed to Lovell General Hospital. Many patients were discharged or transferred to other places. This made it necessary to decrease the number of nurses and by September all of the students had been transferred. Those from the East went to Walter Reed, Washington, D. C., and those from the West were sent to Letterman General Hospital, California.

The work would not have meant so much to the students had it not been for the assurance, protection and careful supervision of Colonel Bispham, Commanding Officer; Misses Smith and Wilson, Chief Nurses; Misses Beatty, Crosby, Baristowe, and Mrs. Norris, Supervisors, and all other supervisors who stood ever ready to raise and advance the standards of the school—to them the class wishes to express its gratitude.

A Few Things Camp Sherman's Students Will not Forget

How very good to us Miss Roberts, Miss Friend, Miss Sheelow, Miss Miliken and Mrs. Parkhurst were, when most of us were down with the "Flu."

How little Miss Miliken had pneumonia for a day—at least, we saw her trotting off down the road the morning after the doctor had pronounced her seriously ill with pneumonia.

The day we were initiated into the mysteries of our beautiful Diet Kitchen—how proud Miss Sheelow was of it.

How Miss Miliken sh-h-ed us through all our science classes—and yet smiled at each inane thing we said.

The afternoon they told us we were to appear in caps the next day.

How for months afterwards the chief topic of Miss Friend's daily lecture was the uniform way in which we were to wear our caps, and the rakish angle of her own cap most of the time.

The many good feeds in the Red Cross house which Mrs. Parkhurst gave us.

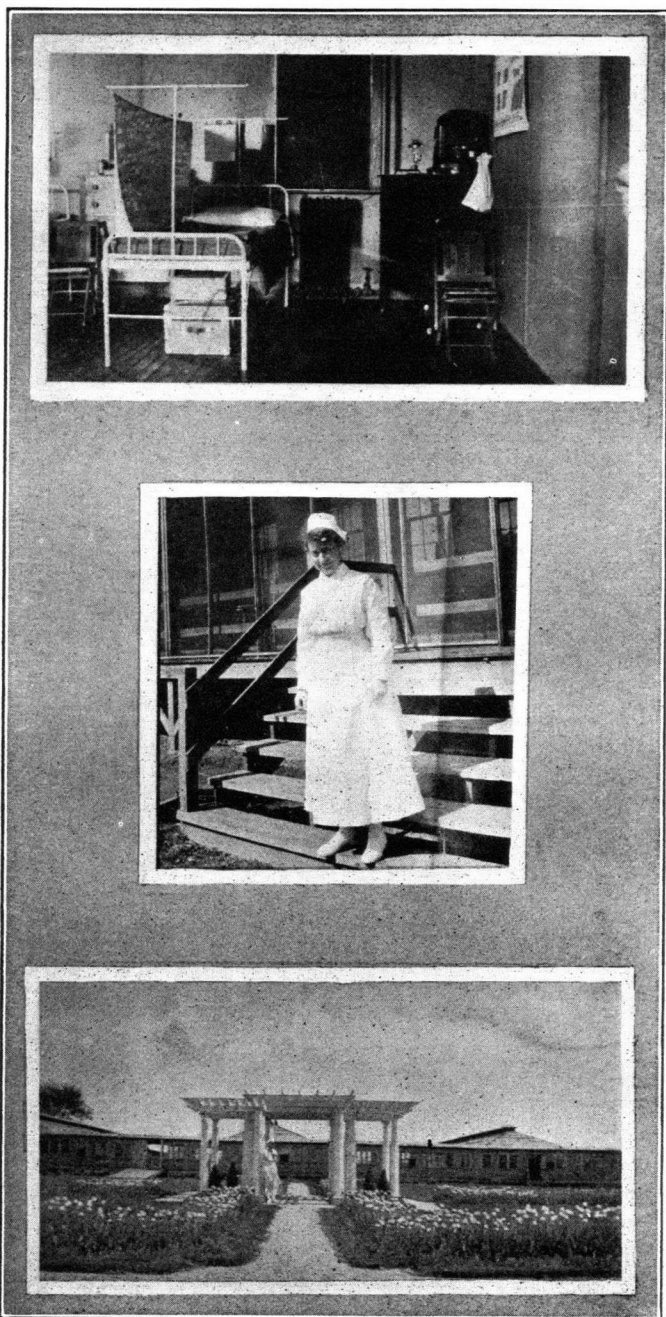

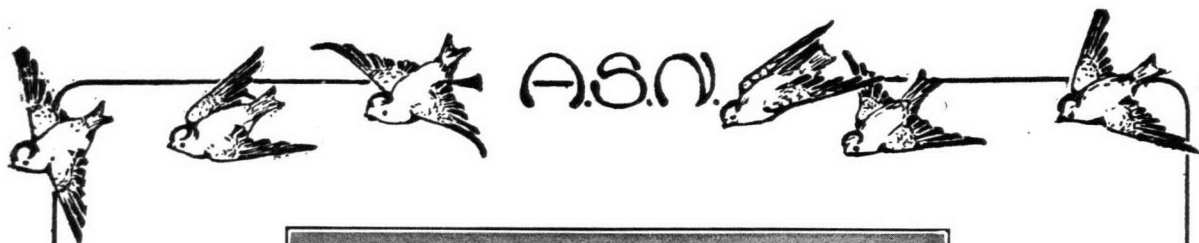

Drill, and how we hated it. "Hay foot, straw foot," Captain Curtis called some of us, and "Take your hands out of your pockets," was his favorite form of addressing us.

"Phlebitis," to mis-quote Shakespeare, a poor dog, but our own, even our instructors adored him, so much, that they allowed him to accompany us to class.

And the day we left Camp Sherman for Bellevue. Even that day is a pleasant one to remember for it showed us the place we held in our Miss Robert's heart.

A Nurses' Kipling

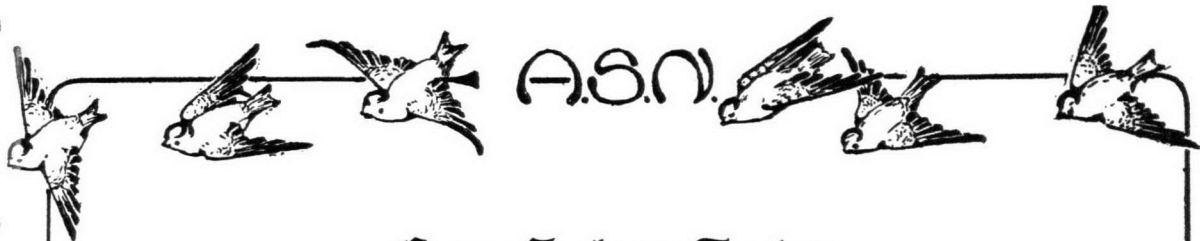

When the Post's last ward is straightened,
And the beds, standing all in a row,
Show spreads that are smooth and spotless,
And flat pillows, as pillows should show;
When we've given out all of the Dakin,
And administered each C. C. pill,
And each dose that goes for making
Well people of those who are ill;
When we've finished with basins and back rubs,
With linen, with trays, and with cart,
When the wash rooms, the porches, and bathtubs,
Have had of our time each a part;
When hot-water bags are replenished,
And we've covered each one as we must;
When the "Supe's" hand, as it wipes off a bedrail,
Shows a palm spotless of dust,
We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it,
Lie down for an aeon or two,
Till some "Supe" comes along and sees us
And sets us to work anew.

Dramatis Personae: Former Army Student Nurse. Her grandchildren.

"Now, grandma, we want something real interesting this evening. You know you have just many things to tell us."

"All right you have been so good today, you were so quiet while grandma was taking her nap."

"About the time our country had a war with Germany many of our soldier boys went to France. Of course when they were over there getting hurt, they had to have nurses to take care of them. The few nurses who were in the army, were sent to France, so that didn't leave anyone to take care of the soldiers in this country. They couldn't get enough graduate nurses, so they decided to have girls enlist and train them. Grandma and forty others were sent way down to Camp Taylor, Kentucky; and on December 1st, 1918, began their training, with Miss Goldberg and Miss Maples as Supervisors; also Miss Cochran as our Social Directress. At first we had classes all day, learning to make beds, and many things which we thought we already knew. Then, on New Year's Day, 1919, we began working on the wards, putting into practice all the things we had learned while in the class room."

"And didn't you have to study anymore?"

"Indeed we did, we studied and studied and studied."

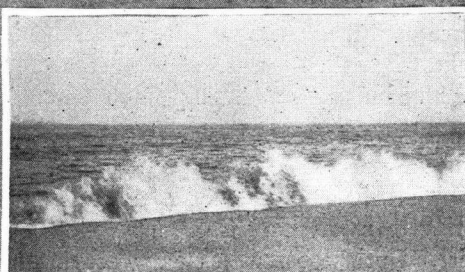

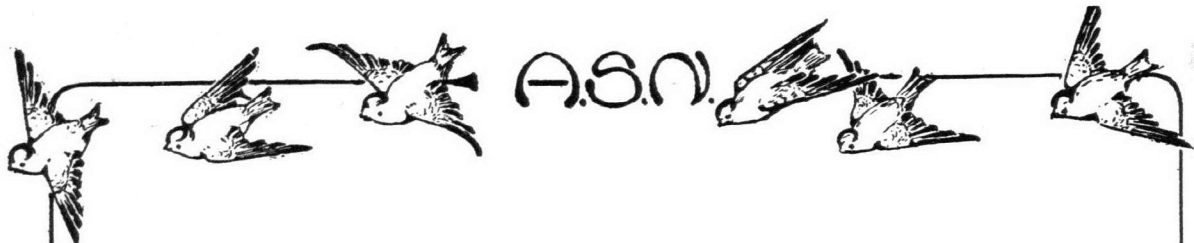

"Did you ever have dances and dance with the soldiers?"

"Oh, yes, we had a dance once a week at the Hostess House, but we did not dance with the soldiers. No one but officers could attend these dances on Nurses' night. But then—we used to have a good time even at that. We always wore our blue uniforms and Miss Goldberg or Miss Cochran chaperoned us."

"Until the first of June our class had never been separated but in June, 1919, some of us went to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, and some to Fort McPherson, Georgia. It was quite hard to part, as we had really been more like a happy family than anything else. Miss Goldberg was so good to us, we just loved it there. But the best part of it was, that in April, 1920, after being separated for eight long months, we met again at Fort Sheridan, Ill. It was not for long, for in six weeks some of us went back to St. Louis Public Health for training. Others went to Henry St. Settlement in New York and the rest of us were sent to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C., and finished our training there."

"Well, grandma, were you glad you did that?"

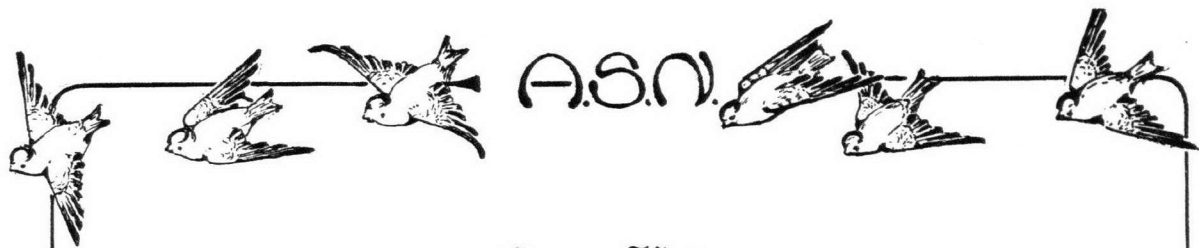

"Honey child, I wouldn't have had it different for all the money in the world. Those three years with Uncle Sam have always been a bright spot in my life, all through these fifty long years."

Three years of alternate turmoil and calm!

Three years of joys and sorrows!

Let us skip backward over these years—merrily and quickly—glancing neither to the right nor to the left of us—lest we see lurking turmoil—to their very beginning, Camp Upton.

There were the joys of thirty different personalities getting acquainted and the happy anticipation of “being a nurse.” We started our activities with classes. CLASSES! all very new and interesting at first, but oh! the continuity of them after the novelty had worn off. In those days the excursions to the beach were gladly hailed. Our THANKS Red Cross for the many beach parties you made it possible for us to have.

Outstanding above all else we will always remember the wonderful spirit and happy home atmosphere instilled into every one of us by Miss Arnold and Miss McPherson. They were constantly leading us to the higher ideals for which we must stand, and always interpreting the hard things as they confronted us. The Camp Green Unit was a welcome addition to our family and we regret very much that we cannot say Upton was their first nesting place.

Our “Probie” days were truly happy, and the reminiscences are pleasant, very.

Base Hospital Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, South Carolina, was the home of three units in the Army School of Nursing, and the foster home of the girls from Camp Beauregard who came for their theoretical work. Located in the pines, and adjoining cotton fields, the tent camp and hospital had a very picturesque setting.

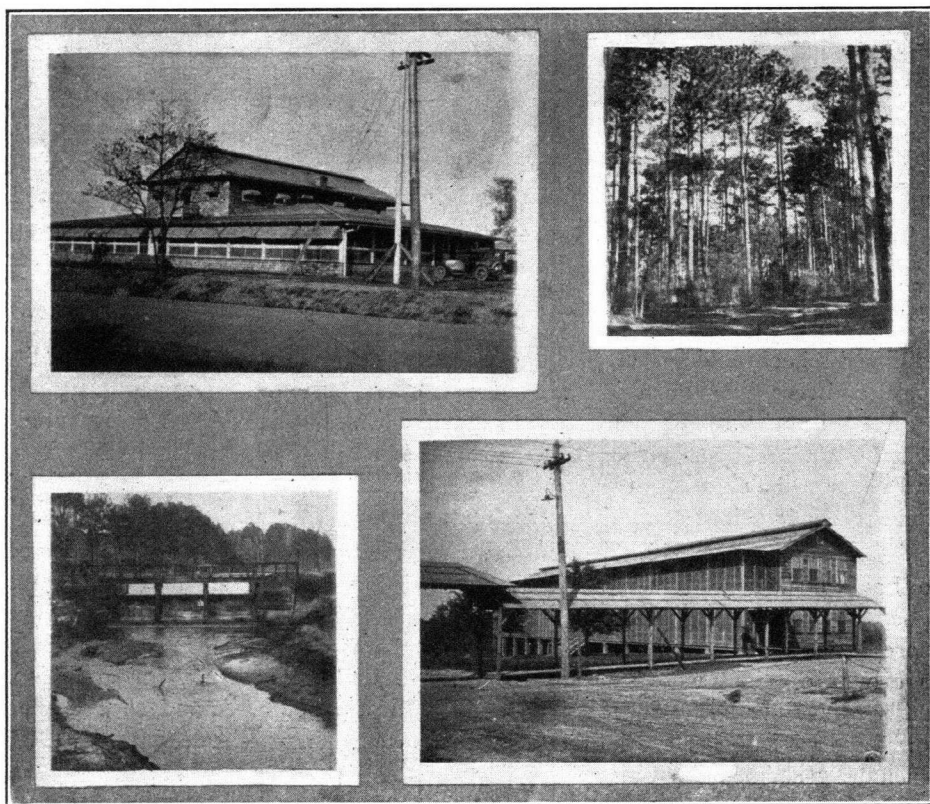

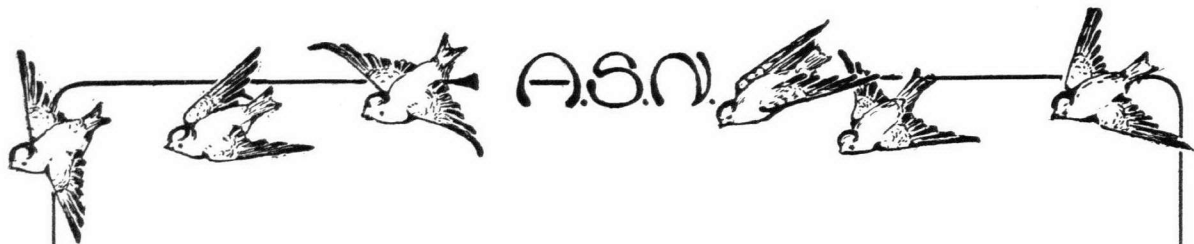

The first unit of the Army School of Nursing, numbering twenty-nine, arrived at the camp in July. This group of college girls gathered from all parts of the country and were told that the eyes of the Army Medical Corps and the Nursing profession were upon this experiment. It lay with them to make it a success, but the Chief Nurse, Marie Louis, and the Supervisors, Misses Gillett, Learned, Howard and Edge, were the inspirations for the fulfillment of these ideals, while the Commanding Officer, Col. Barndollar, broad-minded and efficient in all details of hospital management, supported and encouraged the undertaking.

Every need for the highest type of training was provided. The splendidly equipped school building, the well supervised practical work on the wards and the social and recreational activities shared with our supervisors. Dear to every girl are the memories of afternoon teas in the Red Cross, when Miss Louis poured; also the Wednesday evenings At Home planned by Miss Simpson, Social Director; and never to be forgotten are the Vesper Services in the little Engineer's Chapel and the evening sings at the Bowl, the open air amphitheater.

On January 24, 1919, the twenty-two remaining of the unit were transferred to Lakewood, New Jersey, General Hospital No. 9, another delightful home where the first student nurses were welcomed. The overseas patients here gave more varied types of experience. This hospital was closed in May, and the unit, in groups of eight were sent to Bellevue Hospital, New York, for affiliation. Other affiliations for Public Health and Psychiatry followed, and each change found the roll call shorter; but the saddest loss occurred at Bellevue, June 20, 1919, when death claimed Fay Carter.

The second group of thirty-five students to arrive was sworn into the service September 10, 1918. Following the Armistice, their ranks were greatly depleted. Those remaining in this unit were transferred to Colonia, New Jersey, where their work brought them in contact with overseas patients. Later in the year they were sent to various New York hospitals for affiliations. Finally in 1920 the remaining four were again united at Walter Reed.

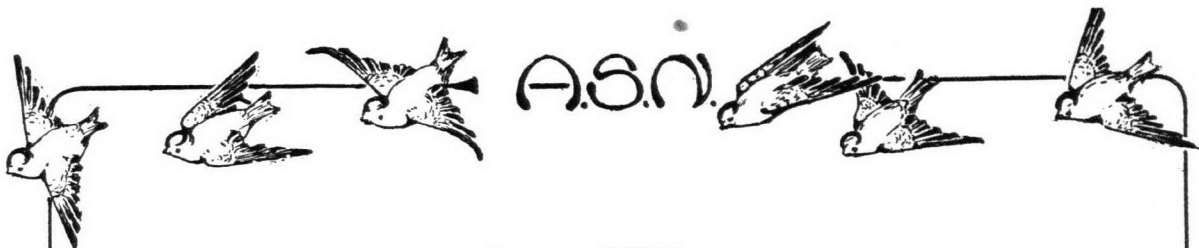

Thanksgiving week of the year 1918 saw the third unit come trooping into camp, forty-eight in number. They occupied a two story building consisting of four dormitories known as A-6 and were therefore called the A-6 group. On December first this class was officially sworn into the service. During the last five weeks of their service, together with the group from Camp Beauregard which had joined them, they had the distinction of being the only students on duty in a tuberculosis hospital. Fourteen members still carry on the spirit of the third class.

Notes from the Diary of a Probe

The train stole on through the darkness and left me standing on the platform at Macon, Georgia, no more enlightened as to what Camp Wheeler was than I had been before leaving home. After a night spent under the sign of the Blue Triangle I received my first army thrill by riding in an ambulance seven miles over red clay roads to the base hospital. Rows and rows of wooden barracks and corridors, a large level drill field and a background of wonderful pines met my gaze.

When I reached my quarters I was quite surprised to find them as nice as they were (having been prepared for almost anything) and was much interested in the other girls I found there. Of the thirty-three girls who came in the first class, I learned that seventeen had been teachers, two stenographers, one had worked with the deaf, two had been private secretaries, two had done home demonstration for the government, two were students and one a surgeon's assistant. No more than two came from any one state, and nineteen states were represented.

We hustled into blue gingham and scattered ourselves broadcast over the grounds and in the various buildings where we were not supposed to be. Unused to military discipline, we flew in and out of every nook and corner during the time that elapsed between our arrival and the beginning of classes. At the end of this brief period I settled down to business and for three weeks had my time completely occupied receiving various laboratory tests and attending classes. In class I felt that I was becoming supersaturated with instructions in practical nursing and in nursing etiquette, i. e., how to fill a hot water bottle, make a bed, etc., and at the same time maintain proper relations with corps men and patients.

By the time we were ready to leave, our group had changed a great deal. A new class of about sixty members had come in, and many from both classes had already left us, a few lured away by Cupid, more by home ties and former duties. After seven months our orders came, and, amidst a flood of tears the cruel March winds scattered my class.

(With Apologies to Longfellow)

You shall hear how Student Nurses—
How Miss Taylor's first young charges—
Gave to us a demonstration
In the class room of the Quarters
At the end of their probation:
How they vied with one another
To display their skill at nursing
That each one might be accepted
In the Army School of Nursing.
Sumptuous was the preparation
Made to demonstrate their knowledge.

As a patient, to oblige them,
Came a graduate, pale and sickly.
Then with morphine grs, one quarter
Helped to deaden all her feelings
As they bore her to the table
In the room prepared beforehand
By ingenious hands of Students.

When the night nurse came that evening
She was told to watch the patient—
Watch for shock and all its symptoms,
And report it in the morning
If a "special" should be needed.

All night long the night nurse watched her,
Kept her warm, gave stimulation,
Put the bed in elevation,

And reported in the morning,
"Patient seems a trifle better."
But the next day found the patient
With an anxious, drawn expression.

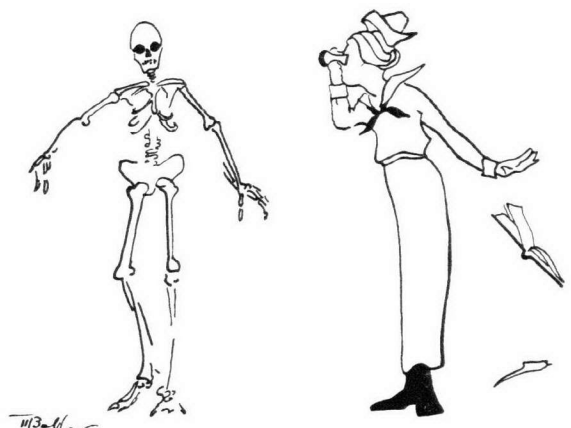

In the evening came the night nurse,
To her duties much discouraged,
For they told her that the patient
Had developed a new symptom.

For the deadly pneumococcus
Had begun his work in earnest,
And had left his deadly poison
To be fought with by the nurses.

You should see the list of treatments
Given by the Army students
To that patient, pale and sickly,
In her struggle for existence.

But the treatments must have cured her,
For her ailments sudden left her,
And she rose up hail and hearty,
Smiling on her benefactors.

This was just a demonstration, mind you,
Given by the Army students
In the class room of the Quarters
On the eve of their acceptance
In the Army School of Nursing.

Our Affiliations

It has been said that "absence makes the heart grow fonder," and to every student in the Army School of Nursing this will ring true of our affiliations.

Going out from the studied and planned protection of the Army Hospitals to the stern realities of civilian hospitals, typical among them Bellevue, New York, and Cook County, Chicago, Ill., tried the spirits of the bravest, and it was with endurance as the motto that they struggled on; but now comes the realization of the splendid opportunities such associations have given. Adaptability and self-adjustment to environment are two most important factors in the training of a nurse, and in such fields the affiliations of Army School of Nursing could not be excelled. We do not grow in doing easy tasks; it is the trials and almost insurmountable hurdles that develop.

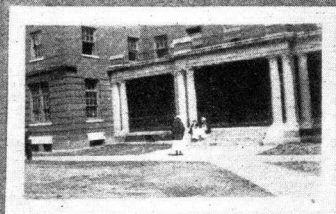

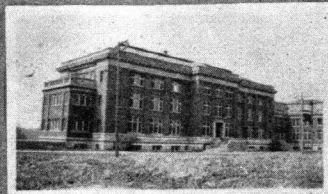

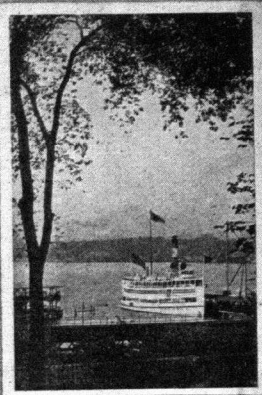

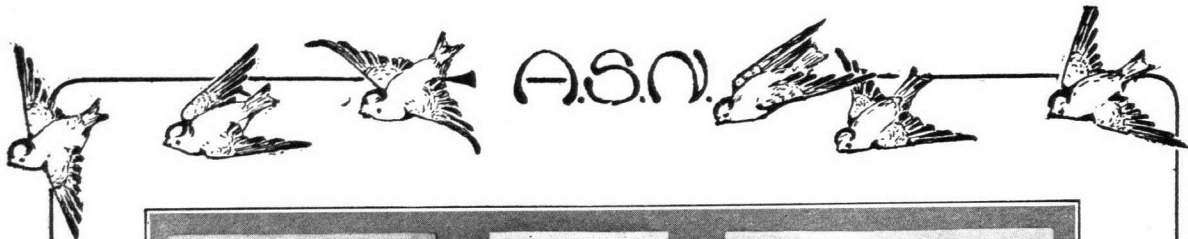

Thus every girl is proud to have met and conquered her training in Gynecology, Pediatrics and Obstetrics, planned and provided for in the foremost hospitals in the United States. These hospitals gave a remarkably varied experience in types of disease and injury as well as personal characteristics. With pride the Army students can feel that these hospitals most regretfully closed their affiliations when our present class had completed their terms.

This discipline and contact with the different methods and types of patients provided an excellent foundation for the affiliations in Public Health, most prominent among which have been Henry Street Settlement, New York City, work in connection with Philadelphia General Hospital, and recently a class with the Visiting Nurse Association of Washington, D. C. The work in the Public Health Field has proven most interesting and instructive, developing particularly powers of resourcefulness and ability to assume responsibility.

Lastly the affiliations in Psychiatry have been much appreciated. Many girls who accepted most reluctantly returned with the feeling that they would not have missed that for anything. This almost new field promises large opportunities to those interested.

Of all the affiliations it can be said—the training was good. The opportunities for comparison with and valuation of our own school was most helpful, and the broadening conception of and consideration toward others' viewpoints add to the well-balanced and sympathetic women which we aim to be.

Our parting wish is that we may in some measure have given in return to our affiliating hospitals and settlements the inspiration and help they have given us.

"I Learned about Patients from These"

(With Apologies to Kipling)

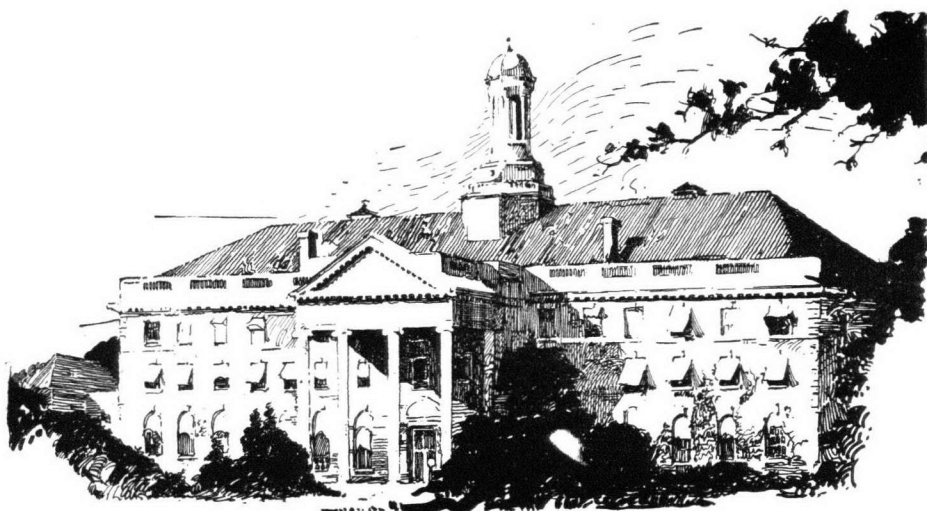

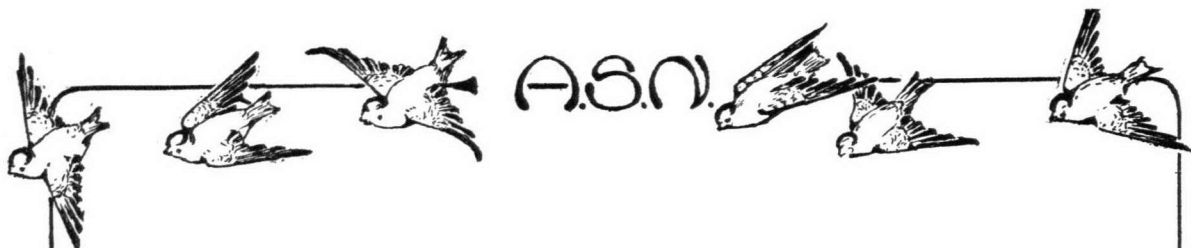

I was a young one at Fox Hills,
Painfully shy to begin;
The overseas patients they helped me
To stick it out, and to win,
Young like myself, and my first ones,
More like the brothers one sees,
Showed me the way to be brave and gay,
And I learned about patients from these.

Then I was ordered to New York,
To Lying-in-Hospital there,
And I took care of tiny new babies,
Wee bald heads, or with soft, downy hair;
Funny and red-faced and cunning,
Dolls they were, if you please,
And I loved them alike, black, yellow, and white,
And I learned about patients from these.

Then we were shifted to Post Grad,
This time I'd women to nurse,
And I took care of some who were angels,
And some who were devils or worse,
They taught me the meaning of patience,
Which every Graduate knows,
And I found that a smile is always worth while,
And I learned about patients from those.

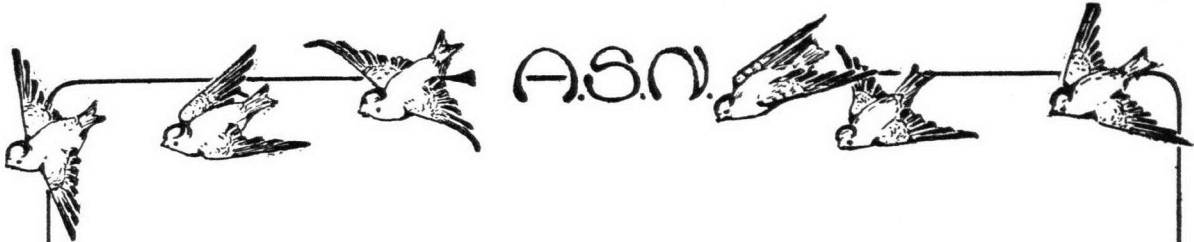

Then I came home to the Army,
Back to the soldiers again,
Back to the wounded heroes,
Boys who were every inch men;
Spoiled just a bit was their trouble,
They didn't know how it shows,
And I wouldn't complain, 'cause I liked them the same;
But—I learned about patients from those.

I've taken my work where I've found it,
And now it's the end of my training,
And the more I have learned about nursing,
The less is my love for it waning.
But the ends of its scrubbing and toiling,
And dreaming new patients to see,
So be warned by my lot (which I hope you will not),
And learn about patients from me.

ATHLETICS

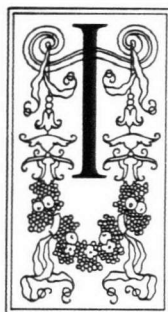

1921.

Athletics

F, some night this last winter, you could have popped into one of the barracks of the Army School of Nursing at the Walter Reed Hospital about 7.15 P. M., you would have thought you were truly back in college. Work was over for the day and all the students were hurrying out of blue uniforms into warm clothes for it would be a cold ride to town in an ambulance. Everyone was going to a basket-ball game, to help cheer her school team on to victory—the Chief Nurse, the Supervisors, and ever so many students! This game might have been one of the “home games” played in the big “Y” or in the Red Cross House, for here the Army students played such teams as George Washington University, Wilson Normal School, War Risk Insurance teams and many others.

Then you would have wanted to know all about athletics in the Army School of Nursing. Probably the idea of physical culture in a school of nursing was something entirely new to you, but to Army students it is a story almost three years old. Just that long ago the Bluebirds, as they are called, arrived in Army cantonments and posts all over this country, and as a side issue from their training began the development of organized athletic activities. How awkward they felt when an imposing officer first gave them the command, “Hips firm, on your toes raise, knees bend!” and how many of them lost their balance. But a little time every day spent in “setting up exercises” soon brought them to the stage when they no longer felt they were “up-setting exercises.”

This initial step having been taken, next came advanced military drill, and almost any day on the parade ground you could see a company of students executing “right front into line” with apparent ease. At some of the camps the students also procured, through their social directors, opportunities to develop their ideas in aesthetic dancing.

Of all the facilities that the camps and posts have offered for participation in various forms of athletics, probably none are more popular with the average student than the open-air swimming pools and the tennis courts. The more adventurous students enjoy horseback riding, and many an enthusiastic fan turns out for baseball. Many students upon returning from civilian affiliations expressed their appreciation of similar opportunities in a few of these hospitals.

These forms of athletics have had a threefold value in the Army School of Nursing. Physically the students speak for themselves, as on the whole they are healthy, energetic and well developed. Interscholastic games have removed the barrier between a nursing school and other institutions of learning. Aside from this social value, the mental relaxation which follows such activity is of decided importance. Organized athletics have proved such a success in the Army School of Nursing and in some other nursing schools that in time they will be included in the Standard Nursing Curriculum.

Our centers pass a beauty. Side centers are on duty, Our guards stick like a coating Our for words get them all.'

Two staves of musical notation for the song 'Taps'. The lyrics are: 'Take a chance, take chance, take chance, take chance, take chance, Ope home in an arm-bone.'

Social

Of course it is up to the students to impress the public (as well as the Supervisors) with the amount of work they do, and, in loud voices, you can hear them exclaiming about the number of beds they have made before nine o'clock, or how many dressings they assisted with, but occasionally they break away from the working girls' routine and play the butterfly. Truly, if you didn't know they belonged to this class you'd never be able to guess it.

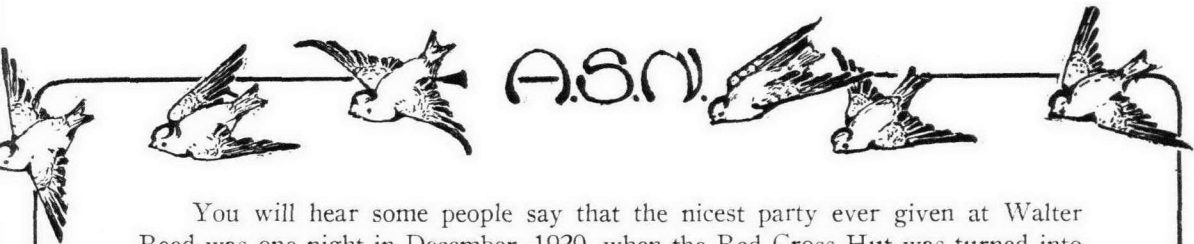

Someone has a happy thought—"Dance." Now the most important thing is to get Miss Williamson to say "yes," because that means she is willing to help in every way to make it a success. It's impossible to have a really good one unless Mrs. McKee is on our side—and she is always. She is a wonder and begins at once to help each committee in turn, and soon everybody is interested and in a short time solves and checks off all the problems. The time, the place, music and eats all look like trivial affairs when she handles them. Of course even she has to have help, and there is where the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C. and Mess Personnel come in, and to each of them the student nurses give a vote of thanks.

The parties started way back when the school was very young, in Quarters No. 5, with a grand old Christmas party. There were stockings, a Christmas tree, fancy dress 'neverything. We were Probes then and staying up after ten o'clock was quite devilish.

The hot weather on the Fourth didn't check the good times. Early in the morning everybody rushed to the Athletic Field to see and do all they could. Everybody was eligible, but the stronger you were the more welcome. There was every known kind of contest, races, tug-of-war, pie eating, swimming, diving, the most artistic wheel chair (with its patient) and many more. It's needless to say that the students were victorious in more than one race, for instance, Miss Florence and Miss Dulles each have a little cup to show "Annette" has nothing on them.

As an introduction to the "Society of the Post," a dance was given for the girls from the Camps in October, 1919. The story of their charms could not have been unknown, for everybody on the Post came to meet the new "Blue-birds." The K. of C. offered for the occasion its hospitable walls and looked very pretty with its autumnal decorations of leaves and flowers. There were, however, none of the wall variety seen.

Mr. B—— played as if he had just come from Baltimore, and the enthusiasm in the "liquid notes" of his bow seemed to be transmitted to every foot. When "Home, Sweet Home" came, only too soon, it got many an encore.

You will hear some people say that the nicest party ever given at Walter Reed was one night in December, 1920, when the Red Cross Hut was turned into a Cabaret and the histrionic talent of the students came out from its hiding place of everyday existence.

The guests of honor were the members of the Class of 1923, and each girl was escorted to the party by a gentleman who, strangely enough, wore his hair plaited down his back beneath the protective covering of his collar and shirt. Stranger still was, perhaps, the disregard of convention by more than half of the men, who wore caps and hats and who (whisper it) never took them off during the whole evening.

There was dancing—of course. If you had never danced before, well, you danced anyway, as Joe B. was playing his violin as only he can play, and his "pep" was infectious. Miss Taylor had to be asked off the floor; she did not, however, accept the invitation. Then there were stunts. Each camp's stunt surpassed the one that went before and encores were demanded.

"Hutchie" walks the tight rope, held by two huskies from Camp Meade. She featured a parasol, stockings making the dainty fringe.

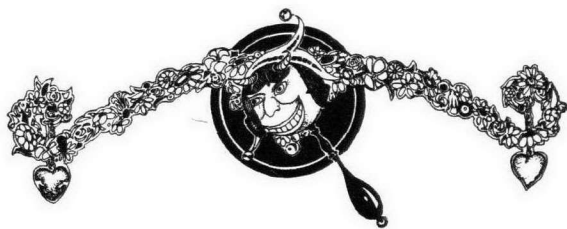

"Bootsie" operates while "Callie" gives the anaesthetic to a poor student nurse who must be "in a bad way," for the incision is made from the tonsils to the appendix. Technique is carefully observed, but despite the skill of the surgeon the patient is found to be a skeleton upon completion of the operation.

Miss Hansborough reveals herself as a comedian worthy of note in a character dance which not only brought down the house but a gentleman from the gallery to relieve her lonely condition of spinsterhood.

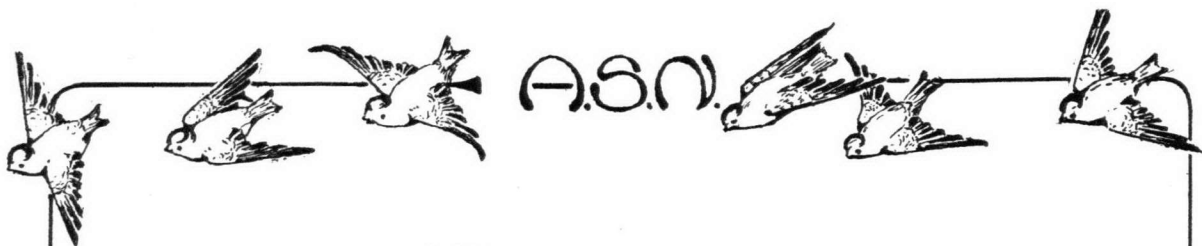

"Hendy," in the person of "Bill Thay," took the audience back to childhood days and through the land of make-believe. So successful was she that those who lived in the Argonne dared not make the journey, for fear they might "Thee Thith" lions on the way.

The girls from Camp Devens sang a most delightful parody on "I Ain't Got Weary Yet."

Oh, I ain't got weary yet,
Oh, I ain't got weary yet,
Making beds up all day long,
All the time I'm singing the song,
And I ain't got weary yet,
And I never will, you bet,
Every patient that I see,
Starts in making love to me,
If this is war it just suits me,
And I ain't got weary yet.

Wedding Ceremony

Dearly beloved friends, we, the student nurses from Zachary Taylor, scrubbing down the long, long trail under close supervision and instruction, have assembled here with friends and supervisors to witness the solemnization of the bands of wedlock of Nurse Materia Medica and Corporal Ethics Anatomy. If any one here can show just cause why these two cannot work together, let him speak now or forever hold his peace.

To the Man, Corporal Ethics Anatomy: Wilt thou have this nurse, Materia Medica, for thy wedded wife to live together more closely than the molecules of an inseparable compound? Wilt thou love her from the depths of thy diaphragm, wilt thou honor and adore her more than thy cherished chevrons? Wilt thou keep her in sickness whether it be hemolytic streptococcus or Ebert Gaski bacillus that hold her in their deadly grasp?

Answer: I will.

To the Woman, Nurse Materia Medica: Wilt thou have this corporal, Ethics Anatomy for thy wedded husband to have and to hold as only those bound by an ethical Emersonian relationship know how? Wilt thou obey his every rule and regulation, even to refrain from meeting him at the Willard Hotel or the Red Cross House? Wilt thou care for him in sickness even to the taking of his T. P. R. and the giving of his daily bath, and forsaking all others, wilt thou cling to him as only yeasts and molds know how?

Answer: I will.

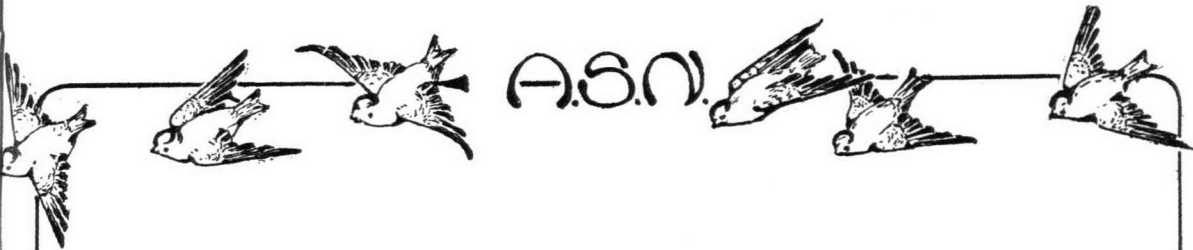

Double ring ceremony, using vertebrae for the rings.

Man: I, Ethics Anatomy, take thee Materia Medica, for my wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward to the end of hygiene, sanitation, dietetics or worse.

Woman: I, Nurse Materia Medica, take thee Corporal Ethics Anatomy for my wedded husband, to have and to hold from this day forward, to love and to cherish and obey, until only the ravages of graduation do us part; and with these rings I thee wed, and hope that none of the treatments kill thee dead.

Essay on the Brain

The Brain is the top floor apartment in the "Human Block" known as the cranium, and kept by the Sara sisters, Sara Brum and Sara Bellum, assisted by Medulla Oblongata. All three are nervous, but are always confined to their cells. The Brain is done in gray and white, furnished with light and heat. It has regular connections with the outside world by way of a spinal circuit. It is usually occupied by the Intellect Bros.—Thought and Ideas.

The Spirit of 1918

Let us sing to the Spirit of 1918,

A song that never can die,
Let it ring through the years,
That all future fears

Of war will be but a lie.

Like a magnet it charged

Our youth of fine steel
And drew them together
To work and to fight
Through that terrible night,
That Justice might have a fair deal.

Thus it worked through us all,
And each did his best,

Whatever his duty might be,
To help win the fight
For Democracy's right,
To save and to keep the world free.

So let it not die, this spirit so fine,

That helped us to conquer the Hun,
But keep it alive,
And help it to thrive,
In many good works to be done.

VERA LAWTON.

Farewell!

We have walked to our work by the pale stars' light,
Or the first faint flush of the day;
And now it is over, we're looking back
Over the endless-seeming track,
Sometimes golden and sometimes black,
To the turning point of the way.

Our choice was made in the days of stress—
The days when our Country's soul lay bare—

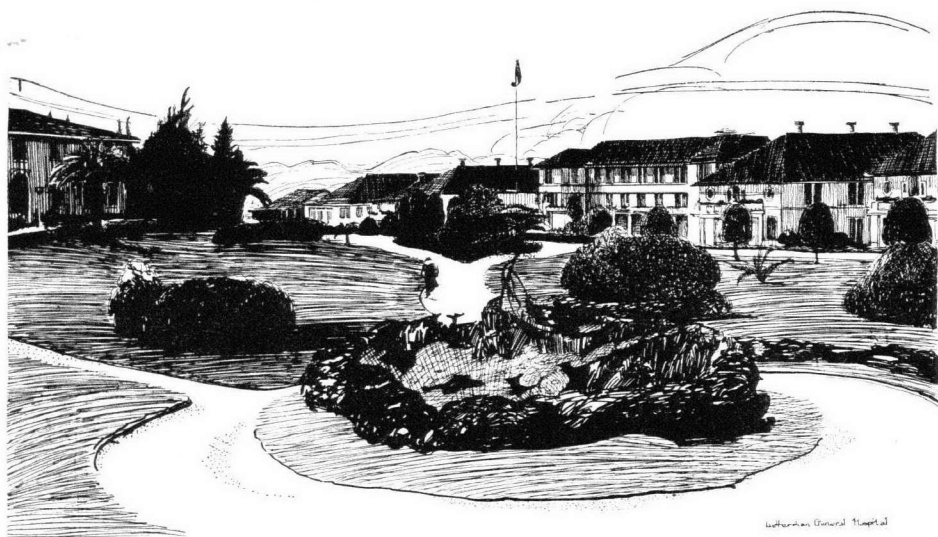

When the brothers with whom we had fought and played,
Steady-eyed, silent, unafraid,
Went. And a vow in our hearts we made
To follow their steps and dare.

We have walked to our work by the pale stars' light,
Or the first faint flush of the day.

Three years of our youth! But we've done our part.
We've gained a more understanding heart,
A deeper knowledge, a woman's art,
And we're glad that we chose the way.

Student Government

THE purpose of this organization is to unite the members of the Training School in such a way that a self-governing body is formed which aims to uplift the ideals and standards of the School by developing a strong sense of individual responsibility.

The Constitution was drawn up by a committee of five students. It was approved by the Chief Nurse and accepted by the Student Body the last of December, 1920. It provides for a Student Council, composed of the officers of the Association and two other members. All matters concerning house rules and conduct are settled by the Council. It acts as a Court of Inquiry and as a Judiciary Committee.

Inspection of Quarters is made each morning by three students and once a week the President of the Association accompanies the Chief Nurse on an inspection tour of the students' quarters. Each room is graded and the record posted.

Our rules and regulations are few and the honor system is the basis of the entire organization. For instance, late leaves may be used as desired insofar as they do not interfere with the health and duties of the student, and so far this privilege has not been misused.

It has been said that one of the most important things in life is to find one's self, and we at Letterman think there is nothing like Student Government for making discoveries. In no other way can one become so well acquainted with individual judgment and standards as when put on the honor system.

Student Government is an ideal toward which every training school would do well to work. It is still new to us and we have much to learn, but we are determined it shall prove successful, not only for our sakes but for the later members of our Training School.

ELEANOR LOWELL, President of Associated Students.

Mrs. Sippy and Uncle Sam

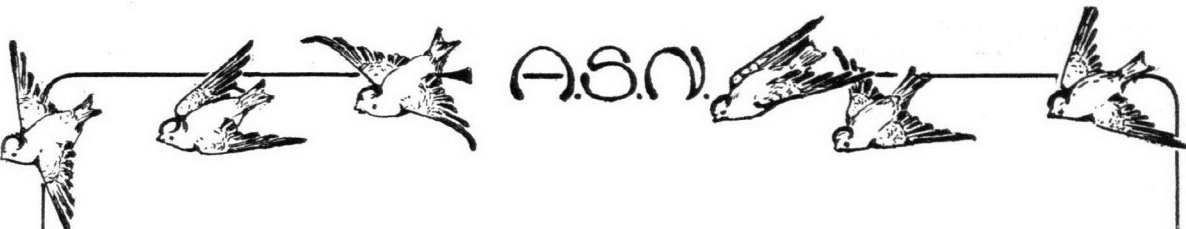

Mrs. Sippy is very tall, well built and handsome. In fact, she is as tall as Uncle Sam. Way up in Minnesota she holds her head in the air and she seems to get wind of all of Uncle Sam's affairs. Now and then she assumes her "women's rights" and assists him in his undertakings.

During the great war Uncle Sam adopted several hundred daughters to help him care for his brave sons. The daughters were not old-timers at this work, but they were very willing to learn. So Uncle opened a great school for them and called it the Army School of Nursing. As Uncle's students, nurses were acquiring knowledge; they were also caring for his soldiers. After the war was over many of the boys regained their health and returned to their homes. But there were still others who needed the best care Uncle Sam could give them.

Thought he, "I will have my Blue-birds help me care for the rest of my boys, and finish their training, so that they will be fine women ready to assist me if I need help again."

Uncle is wise and wary, and every day he is learning more about women and what they want. He knew very well that all his Blue-birds would have a secret desire to graduate at Walter's house, because Walter lives very near the big White House that shelters our President. The Blue-birds knew that the President would be far too busy to travel way past Mrs. Sippy to visit Letterman. So Uncle thought and thought—he knew that he would have to be fair and square—and very definite with these ladies. An idea struck him, Mrs. Sippy was the very one to help him. He grabbed his high hat, flipped his coat tails, and with a few long strides across the states, soon stood before her, hat in hand.

"My dear madame, you are very diplomatic, you have traveled extensively, and you have a swift current of understanding. I come to you for counsel and advice. What shall I do with my Blue-birds?"

Mrs. Sippy was before him in a shimmering green and blue gown. Majestically and decidedly she stood with both feet firmly planted on the Gulf, and either arm extended—one to the East and one to the West.

"Honored and respected sir, I will decide for you. The East is West, and the West is East in the good old U. S. A. Furthermore, the House of Letterman is as beautiful and well-furnished as is the House of Walter Reed. Those on my right side go to the East, and those on my left side go to the West. Because your glorious country is as great as it is, it seems necessary and most logical that there be an Eastern and a Western Division to your new and wonderful Army School. Though your fair Maryland and lovely California are thousands of miles apart, they are united and strong under the Stars and Stripes. So will your Eastern and your Western Blue-birds be united in spirit, work and ideals under the banner of the Army School of Nursing."

Uncle Sam gave Mrs. Sippy a royal salute, thanked her heartily, and told her that she ought to be a Major in the Army Nurse Corps.

V. KNOLL.

Praise to Letterman

Tune—Same as Above

Letterman, beside the bay,
Among the pines we love to stray,
Where mists and fogs, the sun's bright day,
Around thee love to play.

Letterman, we sing to thee;
We love thy trees, thy ocean breeze;
We'll ne'er forget thy skies of blue;
Our Army School.

REFRAIN

Our voices raise to Letterman,
And thee we praise, oh Letterman,
Thy shadowed ways where duty sways,
Oh happy days at Letterman.

Here's to Major Stimson

Oh, here's to Major Stimson, Major Stimson, Major Stimson—
Oh, here's to Major Stimson, who's Dean of our school,
We love her, God bless her; we love her, God bless her,
Oh, here's to Major Stimson, who's Dean of our school.

Here's to Anne Goodrich

Oh, here's to Anne Goodrich, Anne Goodrich, Anne Goodrich—
Oh, here's to Anne Goodrich, who founded our school.
We love her, God bless her; we love her, God bless her,
Oh, here's to Anne Goodrich, who founded our school.

The Cakesdroppers

The little banded cups and saucers can tell you more about teasipping at Letterman than I can. The fat silver tea-kettle will twinkle when she simmers, about the time the faculty and students from Stanford University and Children's Hospitals were entertained. How straight the straight chairs stood, and how the rockers hardly dared rock until they discovered that faculty and students are the same the world over. Then they laughed with the rest.

The tea cups complain that they had to be washed at least four times when the Public Health students were hostesses to the girls of several sororities at the University of California.

The best wicker rocker has a better story and she looks scornfully at her humble comrades when she tells you that Major Stimson sat in her, and who she vows drank tea and ate as many cakes as an ordinary person.

The waffle iron could impress you with her knowledge of many secret sessions, but your time is short and you cannot wait for more.

Bridge

When we first came into the army we were inoculated with several kinds of bugs to keep us free from disease, but one little bug of which we were totally unaware has come into our midst.

The etiology is unknown, but every night a new victim succumbs to the disease.

The period of incubation is short, the onset is sudden, the symptoms are unmistakable. The patient continually utters such meaningless phrases as "two no trump," "I'll double you," "any honors," "by," "what's trump?" She makes frequent and unexplained trips to the Nurses' Recreation House.

This disease is prevalent among all Letterman nurses, even Chief Nurses are not immune.

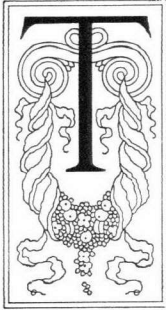

Diagnosis—Bridge.

Prognosis—Poor.

Treatment—None desired.

Tennis, As Is = = At Letterman

THE EAGLE screamed—blam Another ball in the rabbit pen. A howl from the tennis court and four dejected Blue-birds' faces were pressed to the unyielding wire of the enclosure. Business of peering into all the compartments—discouraged silence.

"Well," wailed a would-be sport, "that's the last ball, and that skinny Rabbit Sergeant isn't due to return for hours. Five of them in there now—who has a P. G. in scaling barbed-wire entanglements?"

Biting reply, as follows: "Being as how you were the snappy edition of May Sutton who fired them in there, I fancy you are elected by popular vote to fish them out."

A round of applause by all but the blushing candidate. Gingerly, clinging to the rusty network, the quivering lass made her perilous way to the top, where she met a nice little row of hostile barbs awaiting her. Beaucoup muttering which in one of the coarser sex would have been understood and appreciated as the outpourings of a soul in torment, but dropping from the lips of the tender maid suspended in mid-air, these ejaculations caused the other three on the ground to cover their ears in horror. A mighty effort, a terrific thud and a graceful (?) landing on the roof of the palatial home of Br'er Rabbit—hence to the ground with scant ceremony. Much panic amongst the Beasties. Many scathing remarks from the tennis court.

"Great skulls! Why did you land in that pen? The balls are all on the other side."

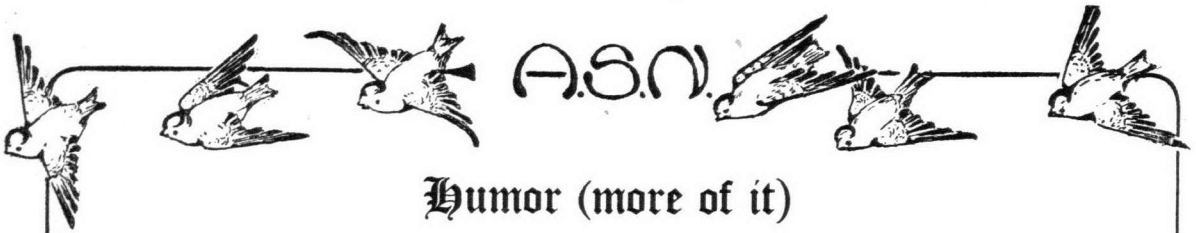

Futile anger and more clambering over gates.

Further conversation!

"That poor Bunny over there looks as if he had been inoculated with gas bacillus. One of them blew up last night. Better keep your eye on him, old dear; he's about to sit down on two of our best balls."

Zam! . . . The speaker dodged. The balls were returned accurately.

"Don't hurry back, gentle dove, that good-looking lieutenant will make up the foursome. You are in such a charming mood you will be good company for the animals! Serve—whang!"

Humor (more of it)

Scene—Diet kitchen, any ward. Graduate nurse and student nurse serving trays.

Graduate Nurse: "Miss Frater, will you carry that tray to Number 25?"

Student (indignantly): "Where's the corpsman?"

Graduate: "When I was in training I served thirty trays, three times a day, alone."

Student: "My grandmother didn't have a sewing machine until she was thirty years old, but that doesn't mean that I'm going to sew by hand all my life."

We find this quotation in the Middle West literature: "The further you travel west, the more you realize the Wise Men came from the East."

A young lad awakening from anesthetic: "What's your name?"

Student Nurse: "Miss Fulton."

Young Lad: "Did your husband invent the steamboat?"

Aprons only!

Student nurses will wear aprons only when on ward duty. When aprons are removed, black ties will be worn to complete costumes!

Tell us why:

Student nurses should meet privates on the Commanding Officer's steps?

The P. F. A. is called a "Kitty Ranch"?

Numbers thirteen, twenty-one and two are such unpopular numbers at the Letterman?

AS THE PUBLIC SEES US

A group of student nurses passed two men students (on U. of California Campus). A straggler heard the following:

"Say, who are those women in uniform?"

"Well, I don't know, but as I understand it they are a bunch of nurses who went into the army for training. The army wouldn't give them much of a training, so now they are trying to give them an education."

SOME FEAT

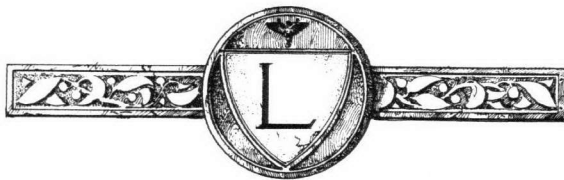

Student Nurse: "Why are you limping?"

Young Captain in Aviation: "I went up in a balloon and walked back."

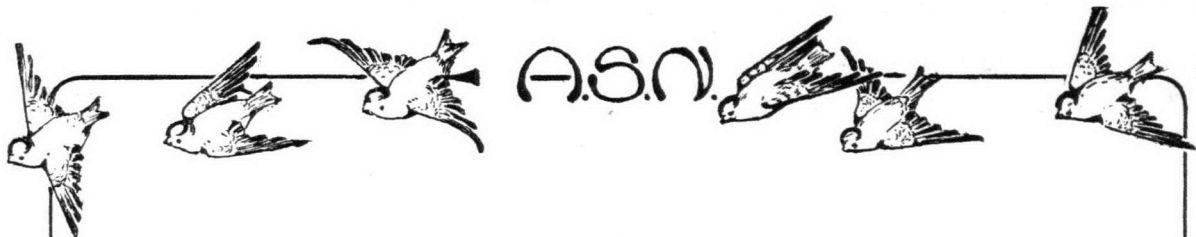

Student Nurse (telephoning): "Oh, Major Reynolds, I forgot to ask about that eye medicine you ordered for Private Jones."

Major R.: "Well?"

S. N.: "Do you drop it in his eyes before or after meals?"

We Are Juniors Now

SEVEN months and twenty days ago Uncle Sam brought forth at Walter Reed a new class, conceived in enthusiasm and dedicated to the proposition of nursing soldiers (and their wives, etc.).

Oh portal of opportunity swinging slowly open before our eyes as we neared the hospital! Already we saw ourselves hurrying from bed to bed, cooling brows which surely must have burned before our arrival. How important we felt as we cast our eyes about us in the train. Surely everyone realized the self-sacrificing call we had been benevolent enough to answer—and, oh, how frivolous every person and thing seemed.

Separate and alone—quite alone—each one of us arrived, and by the time we had wended our way to the Administration building (no one seeming to notice particularly our presence on the post) inquiring for the Commanding Officer, and being told that the Commanding Officer would not be seen at that time of day—why, then we began to feel very unnecessary to the government.

But it was not long before Miss Williamson came to our rescue, and after a few questions placed us in our respective nooks in the Walter Reed family.

Now most of us arrived on or about October 1st, but Miss Joubert seems (we always use the “seems” in our profession) to have read her dates backwards, and arrived a week or so early, having plenty of time, however, to locate a hairdresser—for how could she go about with her hair not marcelled—such a necessity had always been available in Seattle.

Miss Daulton, not being sure just what might hinder her between Wisconsin and Washington, D. C., and wishing to arrive five minutes before the appointed time (we always arrive five minutes before in our profession) also preceded the rest of the class.

Miss MacBryde, living right in the District, didn't get in until the doors were closing, and even then a few of her papers were missing, and also her aprons (but then she could borrow those).

Fourteen of us! That wasn't bad to let loose in a village of sickness—and then we were going to apply ourselves so well.

It was barely a question of hours before classes began, and somehow we didn't exactly begin with them, and when we awoke to the fact, note books, yellow cards, and assignments had blazed a trail far before us—a trail side-tracked with lectures and ward duty. Oh yes, we were finally allowed to go on wards, having received Miss Taylor's approval regarding square corners and the proper way to clean bedside tables.

How kind to us the Seniors had always been; but now they displayed real courage, for were they not at the mercy of our blunders? They were.

We wonder if the supervisors, on their morning rounds, ever realized the shelter a utility room may offer to a probationer who isn't sure just what to be doing during the ceremonious promenade up the ward. Or even a fish globe—what a service it may render, for was it not necessary for Miss MacBryde to dust it and change it to various tables during the arrival of an ether patient—for while thus doing surely no one could expect her to assist in opening the ether bed. An ether bed really is such a complicated affair (even though Miss Willmeroth spent nearly an entire class period demonstrating its construction).

But then there is a great deal to be learned in our profession. Most important is to do and say the right thing at the right time. For instance, we must train our fingers to manipulate various instruments. We must be able to unlock haemostats before an eye compress is entirely cold. In nasal irrigation it seems to be difficult to expel the solution into the proper receptacle. At least Miss Meredith found it so in demonstrating before Miss Williamson. No one was sure in what direction the irrigation was intended to go.

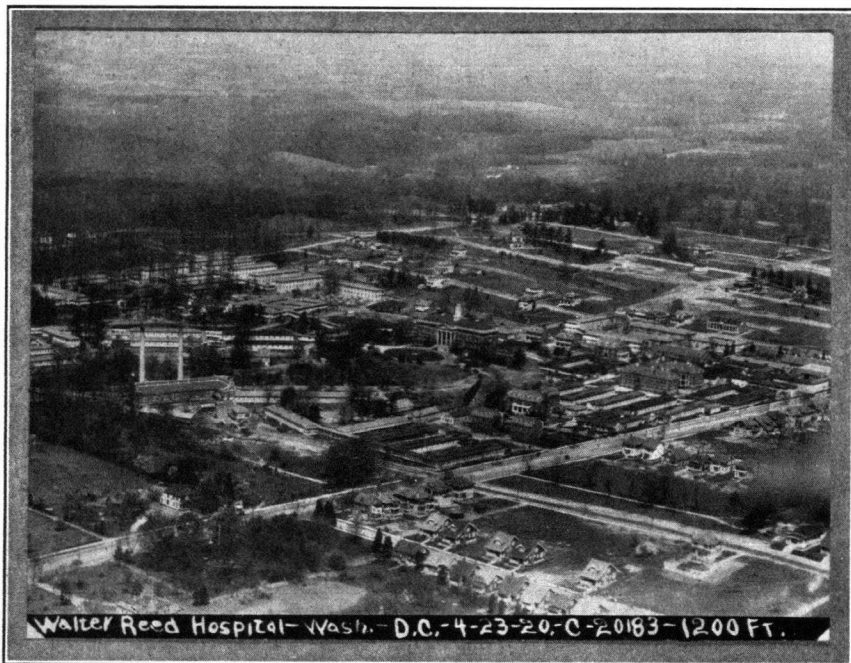

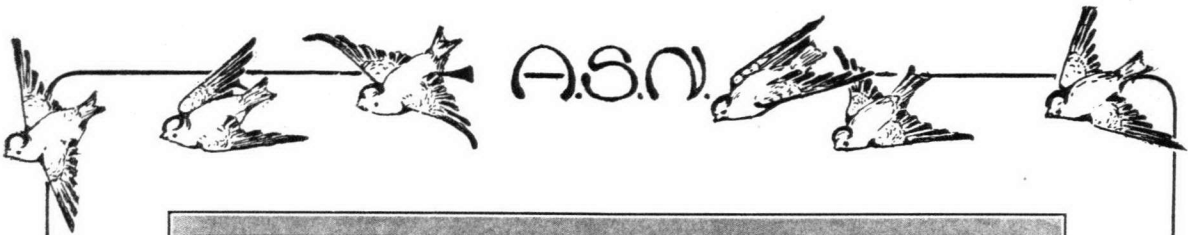

Then considering sterile technique—what a relief it will be when it becomes second nature to swing a sterile towel in the correct way, placing it where it is intended, remembering not to scratch our noses when we are “scrubbed up.”

One day there was great excitement—Supervisors ran to and fro, and finally approached Quarters 9. Terrified, we waited for the worst. Was the place on fire? No. Someone had committed a grave offense—someone had hung her wash in Col. Glennan's backyard! Bravely protecting the offenders, volunteers hastily withdrew the pink articles (Col. Glennan is a bachelor!) and nothing more was said.

So it is we learn something new every day. In Anatomy we have been inclined to add a bone or so, or change its name or location, but Miss Melby says it is most interesting to note that it has all been worked out before us, and it is too late for us to change it in any way.

Oh, so many things have happened since October 1st. So many pleasant events have taken place that our would-be trials are nothing. It's not so difficult to remember that the lens of the eye is composed of thirty-two parts (not to mention the rest), especially when the Seniors give parties, and Mrs. McKee is ever planning taffy pulls, rides, etc.

We are Juniors now, and although there are only thirteen of us (it being necessary for Miss Magnuson to go home to her father) we have pledged ourselves faithfully to carry on the ideals for which this great school stands and to keep alive the spirit of Florence Nightingale.

Comes the call
From afar
Student days, ended now.
Spread your wings, open wide
For life's flight

What ere befall.

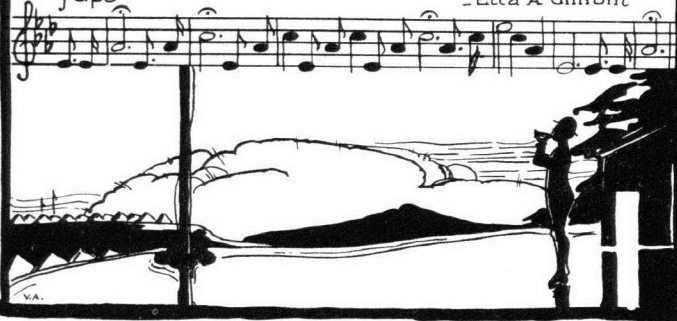

Bluebird fly
Onward go,
Blue wings now turned to snow
Let them rise toward the goal
Of real service

Drawing nigh.

Memories dear.
Golden thoughts
Ever bear, of the days
Spent in camp-happy days,
Bluebird days
Fare-thee-well.

WAR HEROES AT CAPITOL IN INTERESTS OF LEGISLATION FOR DISABLED VETERANS

National Photo
